FIRE SWEEPS TRAIN AFTER CRASH

British Women Convoyed Out Of Jerusalem

Ultimatum Studied By Jewish Leaders

JERUSALEM, Feb. 4 (AP)—Evacuation convoys of British women and children rolled out of barricaded Jerusalem today, while Jewish leaders studied a British ultimatum giving them seven days to cooperate in "locating and bringing to justice members of terrorist groups."

Approximately 2,000 civilians, uprooted from their Palestine homes, were moved under military escort to Sarafand and Haifa, to await removal by plane or train tomorrow to Egypt, on the first leg of their trip home to England.

Tension in the Holy Land continued high, as the British strung new barbed wire barricades in anticipation of new outbreaks of violence. Nearly 200 Jewish families were given 24 hours to find new quarters, after being ordered from Jerusalem houses and apartment buildings to make room for compounds being built for government officials.

The newest security measure was an order forbidding officers and men on British ships at Palestine ports to go ashore.

The British evacuees, mostly the wives and children of civilians, were transported with a minimum of confusion through the sunny Judean hills to the holding centers in Haifa and Sarafand, where they were assigned 40 to a hut.

"Operation Polly"

British soldiers, from red tabbed brigadiers to privates, went out of their way to make the removal—officially called "Operation Polly"—as cheerful as possible.

Moving pictures were run almost continuously at the two centers, military bands and bagpipers took turns providing music, and Tommies in automobiles were sent out to buy bunches of flowers for the dining room and bed tables.

Jewish leaders, meanwhile, debated what course of action they should take on the British ultimatum, delivered last night to the Jewish Agency, official representative for some 600,000 Palestine Jews, and the Jewish National Council (Vaad Leumi).

There appeared to be a widening difference of opinion between Jewish groups on the attitude toward underground violence. In Jerusalem, an anti-terrorist "thou shalt not kill league" came into the open, with posters and street-corner speakers. Officials of the anti-terroristic organization Hashomer Hatzair reported that their Tel Aviv office was ransacked last night.

The Jewish Agency Executive said copies of the ultimatum had been sent to members of the executive in London, New York and Washington and that a reply would be issued in due course.

Agency Resents Implication

The executive said it wished to take immediate exception, however, to a statement in the ultimatum that Jewish authorities had "purported" to condemn bloodshed. The organization asserted that it had taken a strong stand against violence, and resented the "implied charge of insincerity."

There was still no official comment concerning the fate of Dov Bela Gruner, 33, whose sentence to hang started the current tension in Palestine. Gruner, convicted member of the underground organization Irgun Zvai Leumi, originally was slated to be executed last Tuesday, but he was granted a reprieve on the supposition that he would appeal to the Privy Council, Britain's Supreme Court.

Gruner has declined to sign any such appeal, despite the pleas of his attorneys and certain Jewish rabbis, on grounds that he is a soldier and that no appeal should be necessary.

12 Firemen Overcome

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (AP)—Twelve firemen were overcome temporarily by fumes and smoke from burning tires as an extra-alarm fire fanned by a 22-mile-an-hour wind in near-zero temperature tonight swept the block-square Dell Tire Corporation building on Chicago's South Side.

Government Seeks Right To Return Mt. Clemens Case To Supreme Court

Attorney General To Offer Petition

DETROIT, Feb. 4 (AP) — The United States government today sought the right to carry the Mt. Clemens Pottery Company case, possible key to nearly $5,000,000,000 in portal-to-portal pay claims, back to the Supreme Court.

Federal Judge Frank A. Picard announced that the Attorney General's office would appeal Wednesday with a petition to intervene as a party to the six-year-old suit.

Government attaches in court said John F. Sonnett, assistant United States attorney, was enroute from Washington to present the petition.

Sonnett appeared before Judge Picard January 30 as a friend of the court and pleaded for dismissal of the Mt. Clemens case. Thereupon, his status in the suit was at an end.

If accepted as a part of the suit, the Attorney General's office could appeal any decision handed down by Judge Picard.

The court made the announcement late today as it concluded testimony by the company and its former employes.

Comments On Congress' Interest

The celebrated case was sent back to the federal district judge last June 10 after the high court said walking and make-ready time was working time and compensable. Judge Picard was directed to assess this portal time and decide whether it was too trifling to merit damages.

In succeeding weeks, labor lodged $4,800,000,000 in portal claims against American industry.

During today's hearing, both the court and an attorney commented on Congress' interest in the Mt. Clemens suit, which stems from a simple overtime claim lodged by employes in 1941 under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Edward Lamb, attorney for the employes who were members of Local 1083, CIO United Pottery Workers, complained to Judge Picard:

"No matter how this court decides, there will be some congressmen down there (in Washington) making cracks. If some newspaper commented while this case was pending, it would be held in contempt. But some congressman can attempt to sway the court's opinion and then hide behind his congressional immunity."

Balanced Information Sought

Later, in seeking balanced information from both sides, Judge Picard said:

"I do this in case some one appears before Congress tomorrow to say my mind is already made up in this case.

"Because I asked a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers some embarrassing questions here, he immediately ran to Washington and told them he knew what was on my mind. I didn't know myself what was on my mind."

The NAM also appeared January 30 as a friend of the court and asked dismissal of the suit or a limitation of damages.

For nearly five hours today, Judge Picard took testimony on the time spent by employes in donning gloves, readying tools and otherwise preparing for work on their own time. Estimates varied from one minute a day by the company to 20 minutes by the workers.

Senators Hear David Lilienthal Hit Communism

Scientist Says Atom Bomb Cheap To Make

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—David E. Lilienthal, nominated for chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, denounced Communism today as contrary to the democratic belief in "the integrity and dignity of individuals."

Lilienthal took this stand under persistent quizzling by his old political foe, Sen. McKellar (D-Tenn), at a hearing before the Senate members of the joint congressional committee on atomic energy. The hearing was on the question of confirming Lilienthal's nomination.

Lilienthal testified amid these other developments in the atomic field:

1. An interview in which J. H. Rush, an atomic scientist, said that atom bomb manufacture has become comparatively cheap. Rush said "it would be disastrous to place too much confidence in a feeling that other nations can't build atom bombs because they don't have the funds."

Wilson Appointment Endorsed

2. Testimony by President James B. Conant, of Harvard University, endorsing the appointment of Carroll Wilson to be general manager of the commission which President Truman chose Lilienthal to head as chairman. Wilson is 37 and there had been some suggestion he was too young and inexperienced.

McKellar, while not a member of the atomic committee, has been given permission to question Lilienthal. He asked the ex-TVA head bluntly today:

"The truth is that your sympathies are very leftist, are they not?"

"No," said Lilienthal, swiveling the witness chair to look his questioner directly in the face, "but my views on public policy in that respect

Coldest Wave Of Winter Hits Much Of Nation

High Winds Bring Frigid Blast East

[By The Associated Press]

Winds of near gale velocity whipped a biting cold wave eastward to the Atlantic Seaboard Tuesday as much of the nation felt the sting of winter's sharpest blasts.

The frigid air mass, surging eastward at express train speed, sent temperatures into the fastest skid of the winter. Although lower readings have been recorded this winter, weather forecasters said the high winds made the current cold wave the most biting of the season.

The cold air extended from the Rockies and Texas Panhandle east to the mid-Atlantic states. Frost and temperatures in the high twenties were forecast for Northern Florida.

Mercury Takes Long Drop

In Detroit, the mercury tumbled from 34 to six degrees in six hours and the Weather Bureau described the fall as "probably the sharpest in the last 10 years." Washington, D. C., which basked in comparatively balmy weather, expected a sudden drop to 15 degrees.

In Oklahoma City, the mercury slid from 64 to 20 overnight. In 16 hours, Chicago's temperature fell from 41 to one below zero.

Temperatures ranged down to 22 degrees below zero at Devils Lake, N. D., coldest spot in the country. By Wednesday morning the zero weather was expected to extend as far south as Kentucky and the Ohio river and as far east as Pennsylvania, West Virginia and upstate New York.

A general upward trend was forecast to start in the midwest Wednesday afternoon.

Snow Squalls Attempt Cold

Northwest gales and snow squalls attended the cold as it enveloped the Upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys, the Great Lakes and Ohio valley. Temperatures were expected to fall to near zero in the Appalachians, about 10 above in the foothills, and around 15 degrees on the coast.

Before the cold spread to the East coast, signs of spring were evident on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

In New Haven, Conn., farmers were ploughing, elm trees were budding, and maple sap was flowing and crocusses and daffodils were showing. In the Willamette valley in Oregon, some tulips were reported coming up and pussy willows and fruit trees were budding.

Probe Of GI Black Market Setup In Germany Urged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(AP)—"A thorough investigation" of black market operations by the American occupation forces in Germany was urged today by Rep. Hugh W. Meade (D-Md.).

Meade, who is serving his first term in the House, made public the text of a letter he sent to Secretary of War Patterson and Chief of Staff Eisenhower, which said in part:

"I respectfully request that you make a thorough investigation of the conditions in the American occupied zone of Germany and advise me as to your findings and what may be done to correct such conditions.

"If you feel a fair and unbiased investigation cannot be made by the War Department, I would appreciate your so advising me so that I may ask for a congressional investigation, possibly under the supervision of the FBI."

Flights By Chiang Cause Speculation

NANKING, Feb. 4 (AP) — Chiang Kai-Shek today made his second flight in three days to two of China's most important civil war fronts and there was immediate speculation that he had ordered a full-scale offensive to drive Chinese Communists from key areas.

Following up Sunday's flight to Suchow, his springboard base for operations against the important Communist base at Lini, Shantung Province, he made a secret flight today to Chenchow, government army headquarters in Honan Province. He conferred with top commanders at both, then flew back to Nanking.

A government spokesman simultaneously reported one national spearhead was within nine miles of Lini and that three columns were within 30 miles of that city in an advance from the South. He said he had good reason to predict Lini would fall within a week.

McCarthy Would Ease Eviction Regulations

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) suggested today landlords' complaints about OPA rent ceilings and regulations could be eased by giving them more freedom to evict undesirable tenants.

He predicted to reporters that before the Senate Banking Committee completes its study of proposed new rent legislation it will consider something like this:

Let the landlord evict tenants without regard for OPA regulations if the apartment or house would then be rented to a married veteran.

"I think the committee's hearings showed," he told a reporter, "that the principal gripe on the part of the landlord is not the amount of money he gets but about the undesirable tenant that he can't get rid of under OPA rules."

TRAIN STRIKES TRUCK—At least three persons were killed and up to 100 injured yesterday when a crack Southern Pacific train crashed into a gasoline tanker truck near Fresno, Calif. Flames swiftly engulfed the 14-car streamliner. The locomotive, which was not derailed, lifted the truck into the air (above) but the driver escaped injury.

Poland Broke Its Pledge, Truman Tells New Envoy

President Abandons Diplomatic Niceties

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—President Truman tossed diplomatic niceties aside today and told the new Polish ambassador to his face that his country "failed to fulfill" its pledge to hold a free election.

At the same time, the President formally accepted Jozef Winiewicz as representative of the Warsaw government. This ceremony symbolized what officials privately admit is the failure of a major American policy—an effort to put control of the government into the hands of the Polish people.

For the time being, American policy appears to have been thrown on the defensive by the political advances of the Communist-dominated Polish administration. In the background, however, is a reported determination of top officials to deny to Poland such economic aid as they can when that would hurt the government but not the masses of the Polish people.

Winewicz carried to the President the standard form of statement which any diplomat ordinarily presents when he makes his first White House call.

This, emphasizing hope of good relations between Poland and the United States, spoke of the wartime suffering of the Polish nation. It mentioned also Poland's intention to share the search for "a better future and democratic foundations" for a peaceful world.

Mr. Truman's terse, sharp response was in dramatic contrast.

After saying that he accepted Winiewicz as ambassador "of the Republic of Poland" the President said that the American people and the Polish people had a long history of common sympathy.

In fact, Mr. Truman continued, it was to express this "interest in the Polish people" that the United States joined with Britain and Russia at the Yalta and Potsdam conferences to guarantee free elections. He reminded that the Polish government "pledged itself to carry out" this guarantee.

Bill Would Create State Improvement Department, Post Of Chief Engineer

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4—(AP)—Gov. Lane moved today to bring into being an important segment of his legislative program by offering a plan to create a Maryland Department of Improvement headed by a state chief engineer.

The bill, which was formally introduced by Senate President Byrnes, would call for the appointment by next June 1 of an engineer at $8,000 a year to advise the Board of Public Works and the Planning Commission, set up a public building code and generally took after the state's engineering problems.

Meanwhile, the State Senate approved another part of the administration program by voting to submit a constitutional amendment which would limit any Maryland governor to two consecutive elected terms.

This measure, which went to the House, was a part of the Governor's campaign platform and would submit the amendment to the voters in 1948.

The Senate's committee on the Chesapeake Bay and tributaries made another move in the Potomac "oyster war" by approving a resolution which would select three Marylanders to serve on a commission with three Virginians to work out joint Potomac river problems.

The Senate adopted the committee's report and is scheduled to vote on the resolution tomorrow. When it gets to the House something may then be done on the Senate-approved bill which would allow Maryland courts to try Virginians accused of illegal oystering. The House has been holding up the measure, apparently until the Senate resolution comes over, but the consensus has been the bill will pass also.

The House received from Delegate Robinson (D-Balto. 4th) a voluminous bill which would provide for sick benefits among workers in much the same manner as unemployment compensation is now paid.

The bill has a schedule, calling for a payroll tax upon the workers by payroll deduction at a rate of one per cent on income up to $3,000 a year. The money would be paid into a cash sickness benefit fund, with benefits ranging from a minimum of $6.75 to a maximum of $18 weekly.

A proposed constitutional amendment submitted in the House would

Churchill Statue Among Nudes Shocks Exhibit's Visitors

LONDON, Feb. 4 — (AP) — Sculptor Jacob Epstein put on a new show today. It includes 18 nudes and a statue of Winston Churchill among its 40 exhibits, and some visitors found it shocking.

The bronze Churchill is featured, along with an equally bronze nude named Betty, and they stare at one another with unseeing bronze eyes.

What was most shocking to the shockable, however, was not Betty's proximity to the former Prime Minister, but the unabashed poses of some tiny figures, male and female.

Search For Navy Plane, Long Overdue, Launched

Ship Last Heard From At Quantico

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — The Coast Guard reported tonight that a Navy DC-3 plane, en route from Boston to Norfolk, Va., was long overdue and presumably "was down" somewhere along its route. The Coast Guard said it did not know the number of passengers aboard.

The plane was due in Norfolk a little after 6 p. m., the Coast Guard said, adding that the craft carried enough gas only to last it until 8:25 p. m.

The Coast Guard said the plane was last heard from at 7:05 p. m. by a navy station at Quantico, Va. No further details were immediately available.

In Virginia, state police were asked by the airway traffic control center at National Airport, Washington, to be on the lookout for the plane. The airport reported it was last sighted over Chicoteague on the Eastern Shore of Virginia at 7:40 p. m. and was headed west over Chesapeake Bay.

The Navy identification number was listed as 17131.

Meanwhile, an airplane, apparently searching for a landing place, circled over Manhattan and Brooklyn tonight in a blinding snowstorm and the Coast Guard said there was a possibility the craft may be the DC-3 reported overdue.

Alerts of a possible crash were sent to station houses.

The naval air station at Floyd Bennett Field, which had ground controlled approach radar in operation, said it had picked up the presence of the plane overhead, but had received no response to radio messages.

The station said the plane's radio sending apparatus—if any—was out of order.

Maryland state police also were alerted to be on the lookout for the Navy craft.

Four Reported Aboard

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 4 (AP)—The Navy plane reported missing tonight along the Middle Atlantic coast was sent from the Norfolk Naval Air Station today with a load of prisoners for the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., Fifth Naval District headquarters said tonight.

It cleared Portsmouth, N. Y., at 1:55 p. m. today on the return trip and was due at Norfolk a little after 6 p. m.

On board, according to the Nor-

Closed Shop Ban Assailed, Praised

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(AP)—A New York lawyer, Louis Waldman, testified today that outlawing the closed shop would be an "invitation to strikes" and would be a big help to Communists in the labor movement.

He argued before the Senate Labor Committee, following appeals to Congress by two auto industry representatives to break up what they called labor monopolies.

B. E. Hutchinson, vice president of the Chrysler Corporation, and C. C. Carlton, vice president of the Motor Wheel Corporation, both endorsed bills by Sen. Ball (R-Minn) to outlaw the closed shop and industry-wide bargaining by unions.

Waldman, a former member of the New York State Legislature and a labor relations specialist in his law practice, estimated that about 2,000,000 workers were in unions under Communist control. But he said there are still about 13,000,000 workers in unions where Communists cannot gain a foothold.

Old Soldiers, Salts Gather At White House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Former Capt. Harry Truman, a First World War officer with Missouri troops in France, was host tonight at a big White House party that had him beaming even before it started.

Now commander-in-chief of America's armed forces, tht President has lost none of his taste for the lively conversation and taleswapping that can always be expected when soldiers, salts and marines get together to say "do you remember—?"

The occasion was the first Army and Navy reception since February 11, 1941. There were more than 1,800 on the guest list. High-ranking uniforms, resplendent decorations and smart evening gowns were the rule.

Streamliner Hits Gas Truck, Killing Three

Scores Are Injured In Calif. Accident

FRESNO, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP) — The crack Southern Pacific train, San Joaquin Daylight, crashed into a gasoline tank truck-trailer at Kingsburg at 3:25 p. m. (PST) today and at least three persons were killed as flames swiftly engulfed the 14-car streamliner.

Estimates of the number of injured ranged from as low as 25 to as many as 100, the latter the figure of the Kingsburg chief of police. The injured were taken from Kingsburg, 20 miles south of Fresno, to hospitals at Selma, Fresno, Visalia and other communities in the area. Some were in the Kingsburg Hospital.

The Southern Pacific identified two of the dead as Mrs. Rex R. Badley, Dunsmuir, Calif., and the train's engineer, C. Scheckenberger, Bakersfield. One victim was not immediately identified.

Four Cars Not Burned

All of the train except the last four cars, comprising a section of the Sacramento Daylight, were burned, the railroad said. Neither the locomotive nor any of the cars was derailed.

The company listed two dining cars totally destroyed; one car badly burned, seven less severely damaged and four undamaged.

The Southern Pacific Company, after listing the death toll as a known four lives, revised the figure back to three when it learned that Scheckenberger was one of those already known dead.

Philip Lee Mayer, 21, Fresno, driver of the gasoline tanker truck, escaped injury. He told officers he had not seen the oncoming train until he was halfway across the grade crossing.

Many of the injured were released from the hospitals shortly after receiving treatment.

But witnesses said some were in a critical condition, suffering from severe burns.

Uninjured passengers were brought to Fresno by bus. They will proceed to San Francisco by special train and to Sacramento by bus.

Scenes of panic were enacted as the passengers, totaling approximately 500, struggled to get out of the burning cars. There were screams from the injured, some of whose clothes were almost burned off.

Porter Acclaimed Hero

J. C. Ellis, San Francisco, a porter, was acclaimed a hero by passengers. He kicked out a window and pulled many passengers out, then went back into the burning car to salvage some baggage.

A number of soldiers were on the train, mostly on the rear car.

Sam L. Day, San Francisco, a dining car employe, related his attempts to reach the diner's hallway. It was aflame and he and fellow employes had to fight their way back to the pantry. There they removed foods from the refrigerator. Day said, and saved themselves by putting their heads inside the cooler.

"We finally found a fire extinguisher and got the flames down to the point where we could get out through the pantry door and out of the car," Day said. "All through the train people were kicking windows out, but the flames were at least seven feet high in places and many couldn't jump."

Union-Rubber Company Talks Are Suspended

CINCINNATI, Feb. 4 (AP) — The United Rubber Workers-CIO announced today its wage negotiations with the "Big Four" rubber companies, opened here January 27, have been suspended upon the companies' insistence.

The union demanded an increase of 26 cents an hour last November 1.

Companies represented at the conference were the United States Rubber Company, the B. F. Goodrich Tire and Rubber Company and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company.

Nurse Admits She Forged Checks While Under "Spell" Of Gambler

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP) — A 33-year-old nurse, described by her attorney as a quiet church worker, admitted in circuit court here today the forging of $37,646 worth of checks on her aged patient while under the "Svengalic spell" of a horse player.

Miss Bertha Mae Baker told Judge Joseph Sherbow that "I didn't realize I was doing x x x any harm" after pleading "no contest" to charges she had exhausted the bank account of William J. Selick, 85, of Greenwich, Conn.

"I have no sense of guilt," she added.

The nurse, in reply to Judge Sherbow's question why she gave Verfaille money, declared "he would kill me."

"He'll kill me now if he gets his hands on me."

She related that she met Verfaille in June, 1943, and "he couldn't have been nicer" during the early days of their companionship.

"In January, of 1944," Miss Baker continued, "while out on a date with another couple he made improper advances and I promptly rebuffed him. He grew angry and became quite nasty."

"Our relationship was very strange," she added. "I always seemed to say something wrong that would irritate him and on one occasion he struck me violently with his arm, causing great pain."

Miss Baker testified that the ex-Army officer suggested that she take a sheet of tissue paper and trace Selleck's signature from a hospital chart to forge the checks.

New York Men Turn Thumbs Down On Canary Yellow Dinner Jacket

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — The men of Manhattan, from clothier to gay blade-about-town, turned thumbs down today on the latest word in sartorial elegance—a canary yellow dinner jacket ensemble.

The Merchant Tailors and Designers Association, meeting in Chicago, proposed the nifty style scheme of canary yellow dinner jacket with brown trousers, ecru shirt and waffle-cut gold studs.

Fifth avenue's succinct reaction to the gaudy getup was summarized by Hudson Budd, of the Samuel Budd Shirt Company.

"Sounds like an end man in a minstrel to me," Budd chuckled. "We wouldn't turn out anything like that. Our customers wouldn't care for it."

The association said color was to be the keynote in men's clothes this year with comfort running a close second.

But color, reminded G. F. Riegel, of dignified Brooks Brothers Clothiers, "should be guided at all times by an all-important element—good taste."

One voice was lifted, however, in defense of the latest wrinkles in men's fashions. Sidney Garfield whose advertising agency deals in men's wear, explained he liked colorful things because they were "so cheerful and inspiring."

"Even the old codgers," he continued, "are getting tired of funeral clothes. They are decking themselves out in wild-patterned shorts that look like they came out of the jungle, lurid shirts, ties and robes. The tired-tan raincoats are blue and yellow and green now."

British Women Convoyed Out Of Jerusalem

Ultimatum Studied By Jewish Leaders

JERUSALEM, Feb. 4 (AP)—Evacuation convoys of British women and children rolled out of barricaded Jerusalem today, while Jewish leaders studied a British ultimatum giving them seven days to cooperate in "locating and bringing to justice members of terrorist groups."

Gruner has declined to sign any such appeal, despite the pleas of his attorneys and certain Jewish rabbis, on grounds that he is a soldier and that no appeal should be necessary.

Government Seeks Right To Return Mt. Clemens Case To Supreme Court

Attorney General To Offer Petition

DETROIT, Feb. 4 (AP) — The United States government today sought the right to carry the Mt. Clemens Pottery Company case, possible key to nearly $5,000,000,000 in portal-to-portal pay claims, back to the Supreme Court.

Federal Judge Frank A. Picard announced that the Attorney General's office would appeal Wednesday with a petition to intervene as a party to the six-year-old suit.

Government attaches in court said John F. Sonnett, assistant United States attorney, was enroute from Washington to present the petition.

Sonnett appeared before Judge Picard January 30 as a friend of the court and pleaded for dismissal of the Mt. Clemens case. Thereupon, his status in the suit was at an end.

If accepted as a part of the suit, the Attorney General's office could appeal any decision handed down by Judge Picard.

The court made the announcement late today as it concluded testimony by the company and its former employes.

Comments On Congress' Interest

The celebrated case was sent back to the federal district judge last June 10 after the high court said walking and make-ready time was working time and compensable. Judge Picard was directed to assess this portal time and decide whether it was too trifling to merit damages.

In succeeding weeks, labor lodged $4,800,000,000 in portal claims against American industry.

During today's hearing, both the court and an attorney commented on Congress' interest in the Mt. Clemens suit, which stems from a simple overtime claim lodged by employes in 1941 under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Edward Lamb, attorney for the employes who were members of Local 1083, CIO United Pottery Workers, complained to Judge Picard:

"No matter how this court decides. there will be some congressmen down there (in Washington) making cracks. If some newspaper commented while this case was pending, it would be held in contempt. But some congressman can attempt to sway the court's opinion and then hide behind his congressional immunity."

Balanced Information Sought

Later, in seeking balanced information from both sides, Judge Picard said:

"I do this in case some one appears before Congress tomorrow to say my mind is already made up in this case.

"Because I asked a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers some embarrassing questions here, he immediately ran to Washington and told them he knew what was on my mind. I didn't know myself what was on my mind."

The NAM also appeared January 30 as a friend of the court and asked dismissal of the suit or a limitation of damages.

For nearly five hours today, Judge Picard took testimony on the time spent by employes in donning gloves, readying tools and otherwise preparing for work on their own time. Estimates varied from one minute a day by the company to 20 minutes by the workers.

Senators Hear David Lilienthal Hit Communism

Scientist Says Atom Bomb Cheap To Make

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—David E. Lilienthal, nominated for chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, denounced Communism today as contrary to the democratic belief in "the integrity and dignity of individuals."

Lilienthal took this stand under persistent quizzling by his old political foe, Sen. McKellar (D-Tenn), at a hearing before the Senate members of the joint congressional committee on atomic energy. The hearing was on the question of confirming Lilienthal's nomination.

Lilienthal testified amid these other developments in the atomic field:

1. An interview in which J. H. Rush, an atomic scientist, said that atom bomb manufacture has become comparatively cheap. Rush said "it would be disastrous to place too much confidence in a feeling that other nations can't build atom bombs because they don't have the funds."

Wilson Appointment Endorsed

2. Testimony by President James B. Conant, of Harvard University, endorsing the appointment of Carroll Wilson to be general manager of the commission which President Truman chose Lilienthal to head as chairman. Wilson is 37 and there had been some suggestion he was too young and inexperienced.

McKellar, while not a member of the atomic committee, has been given permission to question Lilienthal. He asked the ex-TVA head bluntly today:

"The truth is that your sympathies are very leftist, are they not?"

"No," said Lilienthal, swiveling the witness chair to look his questioner directly in the face, "but my views on public policy in that respect

Coldest Wave Of Winter Hits Much Of Nation

High Winds Bring Frigid Blast East

[By The Associated Press]

Winds of near gale velocity whipped a biting cold wave eastward to the Atlantic Seaboard Tuesday as much of the nation felt the sting of winter's sharpest blasts.

The frigid air mass, surging eastward at express train speed, sent temperatures into the fastest skid of the winter. Although lower readings have been recorded this winter, weather forecasters said the high winds made the current cold wave the most biting of the season.

The cold air extended from the Rockies and Texas Panhandle east to the mid-Atlantic states. Frost and temperatures in the high twenties were forecast for Northern Florida.

Mercury Takes Long Drop

In Detroit, the mercury tumbled from 34 to six degrees in six hours and the Weather Bureau described the fall as "probably the sharpest in the last 10 years." Washington, D. C., which basked in comparatively balmy weather, expected a sudden drop to 15 degrees.

In Oklahoma City, the mercury slid from 64 to 20 overnight. In 16 hours, Chicago's temperature fell from 41 to one below zero.

Temperatures ranged down to 22 degrees below zero at Devils Lake, N. D., coldest spot in the country. By Wednesday morning the zero weather was expected to extend as far south as Kentucky and the Ohio river and as far east as Pennsylvania, West Virginia and upstate New York.

A general upward trend was forecast to start in the midwest Wednesday afternoon.

Snow Squalls Attempt Cold

Northwest gales and snow squalls attended the cold as it enveloped the Upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys, the Great Lakes and Ohio valley. Temperatures were expected to fall to near zero in the Appalachians, about 10 above in the foothills, and around 15 degrees on the coast.

Before the cold spread to the East coast, signs of spring were evident on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

In New Haven, Conn., farmers were ploughing, elm trees were budding, and maple sap was flowing and crocusses and daffodils were showing. In the Willamette valley in Oregon, some tulips were reported coming up and pussy willows and fruit trees were budding.

Probe Of GI Black Market Setup In Germany Urged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(AP)—"A thorough investigation" of black market operations by the American occupation forces in Germany was urged today by Rep. Hugh W. Meade (D-Md.).

Meade, who is serving his first term in the House, made public the text of a letter he sent to Secretary of War Patterson and Chief of Staff Eisenhower, which said in part:

"I respectfully request that you make a thorough investigation of the conditions in the American occupied zone of Germany and advise me as to your findings and what may be done to correct such conditions.

"If you feel a fair and unbiased investigation cannot be made by the War Department, I would appreciate your so advising me so that I may ask for a congressional investigation, possibly under the supervision of the FBI."

Flights By Chiang Cause Speculation

NANKING, Feb. 4 (AP) — Chiang Kai-Shek today made his second flight in three days to two of China's most important civil war fronts and there was immediate speculation that he had ordered a full-scale offensive to drive Chinese Communists from key areas.

Following up Sunday's flight to Suchow, his springboard base for operations against the important Communist base at Lini, Shantung Province, he made a secret flight today to Chenchow, government army headquarters in Honan Province. He conferred with top commanders at both, then flew back to Nanking.

A government spokesman simultaneously reported one national spearhead was within nine miles of Lini and that three columns were within 30 miles of that city in an advance from the South. He said he had good reason to predict Lini would fall within a week.

McCarthy Would Ease Eviction Regulations

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) suggested today landlords' complaints about OPA rent ceilings and regulations could be eased by giving them more freedom to evict undesirable tenants.

He predicted to reporters that before the Senate Banking Committee completes its study of proposed new rent legislation it will consider something like this:

Let the landlord evict tenants without regard for OPA regulations if the apartment or house would then be rented to a married veteran.

"I think the committee's hearings showed," he told a reporter, "that the principal gripe on the part of the landlord is not the amount of money he gets but about the undesirable tenant that he can't get rid of under OPA rules."

Streamliner Hits Gas Truck, Killing Three

Scores Are Injured In Calif. Accident

FRESNO, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP) — The crack Southern Pacific train, San Joaquin Daylight, crashed into a gasoline tank truck-trailer at Kingsburg at 3:25 p. m. (PST) today and at least three persons were killed as flames swiftly engulfed the 14-car streamliner.

Estimates of the number of injured ranged from as low as 25 to as many as 100, the latter the figure of the Kingsburg chief of police. The injured were taken from Kingsburg, 20 miles south of Fresno, to hospitals at Selma, Fresno, Visalia and other communities in the area. Some were in the Kingsburg Hospital.

The Southern Pacific identified two of the dead as Mrs. Rex R. Badley, Dunsmuir, Calif., and the train's engineer, C. Scheckenberger, Bakersfield. One victim was not immediately identified.

Four Cars Not Burned

All of the train except the last four cars, comprising a section of the Sacramento Daylight, were burned, the railroad said. Neither the locomotive nor any of the cars was derailed.

The company listed two dining cars totally destroyed; one car badly burned, seven less severely damaged and four undamaged.

The Southern Pacific Company, after listing the death toll as a known four lives, revised the figure back to three when it learned that Scheckenberger was one of those already known dead.

Philip Lee Mayer, 21, Fresno, driver of the gasoline tanker truck, escaped injury. He told officers he had not seen the oncoming train until he was halfway across the grade crossing.

Many of the injured were released from the hospitals shortly after receiving treatment.

But witnesses said some were in a critical condition, suffering from severe burns.

Uninjured passengers were brought to Fresno by bus. They will proceed to San Francisco by special train and to Sacramento by bus.

Scenes of panic were enacted as the passengers, totaling approximately 500, struggled to get out of the burning cars. There were screams from the injured, some of whose clothes were almost burned off.

Porter Acclaimed Hero

J. C. Ellis, San Francisco, a porter, was acclaimed a hero by passengers. He kicked out a window and pulled many passengers out, then went back into the burning car to salvage some baggage.

A number of soldiers were on the train, mostly on the rear car.

Sam L. Day, San Francisco, a dining car employe, related his attempts to reach the diner's hallway. It was aflame and he and fellow employes had to fight their way back to the pantry. There they removed foods from the refrigerator, Day said, and saved themselves by putting their heads inside the cooler.

"We finally found a fire extinguisher and got the flames down to the point where we could get out through the pantry door and out of the car," Day said. "All through the train people were kicking windows out, but the flames were at least seven feet high in places and many couldn't jump."

Poland Broke Its Pledge, Truman Tells New Envoy

President Abandons Diplomatic Niceties

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—President Truman tossed diplomatic niceties aside today and told the new Polish ambassador to his face that his country "failed to fulfill" its pledge to hold a free election.

At the same time, the President formally accepted Jozef Winiewicz as representative of the Warsaw government. This ceremony symbolized what officials privately admit is the failure of a major American policy—an effort to put control of the government into the hands of the Polish people.

For the time being, American policy appears to have been thrown on the defensive by the political advances of the Communist-dominated Polish administration. In the background, however, is a reported determination of top officials to deny to Poland such economic aid as they can when that would hurt the government but not the masses of the Polish people.

Winewicz carried to the President the standard form of statement which any diplomat ordinarily presents when he makes his first White House call.

This, emphasizing hope of good relations between Poland and the United States, spoke of the wartime suffering of the Polish nation. It mentioned also Poland's intention to share the search for "a better future and democratic foundations" for a peaceful world.

Mr. Truman's terse, sharp response was in dramatic contrast.

After saying that he accepted Winiewicz as ambassador "of the Republic of Poland" the President said that the American people and the Polish people had a long history of common sympathy.

In fact, Mr. Truman continued, it was to express this "interest in the Polish people" that the United States joined with Britain and Russia at the Yalta and Potsdam conferences to guarantee free elections. He reminded that the Polish government "pledged itself to carry out" this guarantee.

Churchill Statue Among Nudes Shocks Exhibit's Visitors

LONDON, Feb. 4 — (AP) — Sculptor Jacob Epstein put on a new show today. It includes 18 nudes and a statue of Winston Churchill among its 40 exhibits, and some visitors found it shocking.

The bronze Churchill is featured, along with an equally bronze nude named Betty, and they stare at one another with unseeing bronze eyes.

What was most shocking to the shockable, however, was not Betty's proximity to the former Prime Minister, but the unabashed poses of some tiny figures, male and female.

Search For Navy Plane, Long Overdue, Launched

Ship Last Heard From At Quantico

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — The Coast Guard reported tonight that a Navy DC-3 plane, en route from Boston to Norfolk, Va., was long overdue and presumably "was down" somewhere along its route. The Coast Guard said it did not know the number of passengers aboard.

The plane was due in Norfolk a little after 6 p. m., the Coast Guard said, adding that the craft carried enough gas only to last it until 8:25 p. m.

The Coast Guard said the plane was last heard from at 7:05 p. m. by a navy station at Quantico, Va. No further details were immediately available.

In Virginia, state police were asked by the airway traffic control center at National Airport, Washington, to be on the lookout for the plane. The airport reported it was last sighted over Chicoteague on the Eastern Shore of Virginia at 7:40 p. m. and was headed west over Chesapeake Bay.

The Navy identification number was listed as 17131.

Meanwhile, an airplane, apparently searching for a landing place, circled over Manhattan and Brooklyn tonight in a blinding snowstorm and the Coast Guard said there was a possibility the craft may be the DC-3 reported overdue.

Alerts of a possible crash were sent to station houses.

The naval air station at Floyd Bennett Field, which had ground controlled approach radar in operation, said it had picked up the presence of the plane overhead, but had received no response to radio messages.

The station said the plane's radio sending apparatus—if any—was out of order.

Maryland state police also were alerted to be on the lookout for the Navy craft.

Four Reported Aboard

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 4 (AP)—The Navy plane reported missing tonight along the Middle Atlantic coast was sent from the Norfolk Naval Air Station today with a load of prisoners for the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., Fifth Naval District headquarters said tonight.

It cleared Portsmouth, N. Y., at 1:55 p. m. today on the return trip and was due at Norfolk a little after 6 p. m.

On board, according to the Nor-

Closed Shop Ban Assailed, Praised

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(AP)—A New York lawyer, Louis Waldman, testified today that outlawing the closed shop would be an "invitation to strikes" and would be a big help to Communists in the labor movement.

He argued before the Senate Labor Committee, following appeals to Congress by two auto industry representatives to break up what they called labor monopolies.

B. E. Hutchinson, vice president of the Chrysler Corporation, and C. C. Carlton, vice president of the Motor Wheel Corporation, both endorsed bills by Sen. Ball (R-Minn) to outlaw the closed shop and industry-wide bargaining by unions.

Waldman, a former member of the New York State Legislature and a labor relations specialist in his law practice, estimated that about 2,000,000 workers were in unions under Communist control. But he said there are still about 13,000,000 workers in unions where Communists cannot gain a foothold.

Old Soldiers, Salts Gather At White House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Former Capt. Harry Truman, a First World War officer with Missouri troops in France, was host tonight at a big White House party that had him beaming even before it started.

Now commander-in-chief of America's armed forces, tht President has lost none of his taste for the lively conversation and tale-swapping that can always be expected when soldiers, salts and marines get together to say "do you remember—?"

The occasion was the first Army and Navy reception since February 11, 1941. There were more than 1,800 on the guest list. High-ranking uniforms, resplendent decorations and smart evening gowns were the rule.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP) — Dr Samuel Ottmar Mast, 74, a prominent zoologist associated with Johns Hopkins University since 1911, died last night at his Baltimore home.

Union-Rubber Company Talks Are Suspended

CINCINNATI, Feb. 4 (AP) — The United Rubber Workers-CIO announced today its wage negotiations with the "Big Four" rubber companies, opened here January 27, have been suspended upon the companies' insistence.

The union demanded an increase of 26 cents an hour last November 1.

Companies represented at the conference were the United States Rubber Company, the B. F. Goodrich Tire and Rubber Company and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company.

Bill Would Create State Improvement Department, Post Of Chief Engineer

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4—(AP)—Gov. Lane moved today to bring into being an important segment of his legislative program by offering a plan to create a Maryland Department of Improvement headed by a state chief engineer.

The bill, which was formally introduced by Senate President Byrnes, would call for the appointment by next June 1 of an engineer at $8,000 a year to advise the Board of Public Works and the Planning Commission, set up a public building code and generally took after the state's engineering problems.

Meanwhile, the State Senate approved another part of the administration program by voting to submit a constitutional amendment which would limit any Maryland governor to two consecutive elected terms.

This measure, which went to the House, was a part of the Governor's campaign platform and would submit the amendment to the voters in 1948.

The Senate's committee on the Chesapeake Bay and tributaries made another move in the Potomac "oyster war" by approving a resolution which would select three Marylanders to serve on a commission with three Virginians to work out joint Potomac river problems.

The Senate adopted the committee's report and is scheduled to vote on the resolution tomorrow. When it gets to the House something may then be done on the Senate-approved bill which would allow Maryland courts to try Virginians accused of illegal oystering. The House has been holding up the measure, apparently until the Senate resolution comes over, but the consensus has been the bill will pass also.

The House received from Delegate Robinson (D-Balto. 4th) a voluminous bill which would provide for sick benefits among workers in much the same manner as unemployment compensation is now paid.

The bill has a schedule, calling for a payroll tax upon the workers by payroll deduction at a rate of one per cent on income up to $3,000 a year. The money would be paid into a cash sickness benefit fund, with benefits ranging from a minimum of $6.75 to a maximum of $18 weekly.

Nurse Admits She Forged Checks While Under "Spell" Of Gambler

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP) — A 33-year-old nurse, described by her attorney as a quiet church worker, admitted in circuit court here today the forging of $37,646 worth of checks on her aged patient while under the "Svengalic spell" of a horse player.

Miss Bertha Mae Baker told Judge Joseph Sherbow that "I didn't realize I was doing x x x any harm" after pleading "no contest" to charges she had exhausted the bank account of William J. Selick, 85, of Greenwich, Conn.

"I have no sense of guilt," she added.

The nurse, in reply to Judge Sherbow's question why she gave Verfaille money, declared "he would kill me."

"He'll kill me now if he gets his hands on me."

She related that she met Verfaille in June, 1943, and "he couldn't have been nicer" during the early days of their companionship.

"In January, of 1944," Miss Baker continued, "while out on a date with another couple he made improper advances and I promptly rebuffed him. He grew angry and became quite nasty."

"Our relationship was very strange," she added. "I always seemed to say something wrong that would irritate him and on one occasion he struck me violently with his arm, causing great pain."

Miss Baker testified that the ex-Army officer suggested that she take a sheet of tissue paper and trace Selleck's signature from a hospital chart to forge the checks.

New York Men Turn Thumbs Down On Canary Yellow Dinner Jacket

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — The men of Manhattan, from clothier to gay blade-about-town, turned thumbs down today on the latest word in sartorial elegance—a canary yellow dinner jacket ensemble.

"It's ridiculous," snorted Grover Whalen, New York's official "greeter" and one of the city's fashion-plate landmarks.

The Merchant Tailors and Designers Association, meeting in Chicago, proposed the nifty style scheme of canary yellow dinner jacket with brown trousers, ecru shirt and waffle-cut gold studs.

Fifth avenue's succinct reaction to the gaudy getup was summarized by Hudson Budd, of the Samuel Budd Shirt Company.

"Sounds like an end man in a minstrel to me," Budd chuckled. "We wouldn't turn out anything like that. Our customers wouldn't care for it."

The association said color was to be the keynote in men's clothes this year with comfort running a close second.

But color, reminded G. F. Riegel, of dignified Brooks Brothers Clothiers, "should be guided at all times by an all-important element—good taste."

One voice was lifted, however, in defense of the latest wrinkles in men's fashions. Sidney Garfield whose advertising agency deals in men's wear, explained he liked colorful things because they were "so cheerful and inspiring."

"Even the old codgers," he continued, "are getting tired of funeral clothes. They are decking themselves out in wild-patterned shorts that look like they came out of the jungle, lurid shirts, ties and robes. The tired-tan raincoats are blue and yellow and green now."

"Bedrock" Policy On Arms Cutting Is Given By U. S.

Depends On Treaties, Effective Safeguards

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP)—The United States, in a "bedrock" declaration of policy, served notice today that world arms limitation depended primarily on the peace treaties with Germany and Japan and the creation of an effective United Nations force to keep the peace.

Warren R. Austin, former Republican Senator from Vermont and chief United States delegate to the United Nations, told the United Nations Security Council that those factors were the "most important" elements which must be considered in world arms regulation and reduction.

Austin made it clear to the council that he spoke after consultation with the highest leaders of his government. After the meeting he said his declaration was the "bedrock" policy of the United States which he would repeat as often as necessary.

Informal Huddle Scheduled

Austin and the delegates of five other countries, including Soviet Russia, will go into an informal huddle tomorrow (11 a. m. EST) in an attempt to draft a resolution setting up an arms reduction commission that the council will accept. The other delegates are from Australia, Belgium, Colombia and France.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate, lined up with Austin in the afternoon session.

Paul Hasluck, Australian delegate, said he could not accept the United States nor the Russian proposals and suggested the six delegates get together in an attempt to draft an acceptable resolution. After some jockeying, the council decided upon that course and adjourned at 4:50 p. m. EST.

It was apparent that all delegates were agreed there should be a commission to draw up recommendations for the council on world arms limitation and reduction of armed forces. Several delegates pointed out the only differences are on minor points.

Long-Awaited Declaration

Austin made his long-awaited declaration, the first policy statement he has made in the council since Gen. George C. Marshall became Secretary of State, to 10 closely-attentive delegations and a packed council chamber.

He thus introduced to the Security Council the new idea that it must keep an eye on the Moscow peace talks in shaping its arms cutting program.

He and Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko agreed on the proposition that the commission must be set up to prepare recommendations for the council but they disagreed on the best approach to the problem. The council must decide.

"Dinky Railroad" Strike At J. And L. Plant Ends

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 4 (AP)—A rent in the amicable pattern of contract negotiations between the CIO-United Steel Workers and the steel industry was repaired successfully today when an unauthorized strike which had idled 3,500 in a big Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation mill at Aliquippa was called off.

Only 18 workers on a "dinky railroad" within the plant were engaged directly in the five-day walkout but their strike in dispute over safety measures disrupted plant operations, causing layoffs of 3,482 other workers.

The railroad workers returned to their jobs today after the firm had notified union contract negotiators yesterday that wage-and-hour talks were suspended until the dispute at Aliquippa "is satisfactorily settled."

Private Funeral Service In Wind-Swept Cemetery Completes Capone Legend

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (AP)—A private funeral service in a tent in a frozen, wind-swept cemetery today completed the legend of Al Capone.

The gangland czar, who personified the era of bloody lawlessness that reached its peak in the twilight of prohibition, was buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery with fewer than two score persons looking on.

Although denied a requiem mass, Capone was buried in the family plot in consecrated ground. Msgr. William Gorman, formerly the Capone family's priest, conducted the simple services in a wind-whipped tent erected over the grave.

Msgr. Gorman earlier told newsmen, "the (Roman Catholic) church never condones evil, nor the evil in any man's life. This very brief ceremony is to recognize his (Capone's) penitence and the fact he died fortified by the sacraments of the church."

Capone's wife, Mae; his mother, Theresa; his brother, Ralph, and his son, Buddy, and two other women attended the brief services.

More than a score of men who declined to reveal their names or submit to photographs were at the ceremony. Old time newsmen said they recognized several of them as members of the old Capone gang.

Capone, who buried his important friends and enemies in a burst of garish splendor, once would have scoffed at the simplicity accorded his own funeral.

Al was placed in a silver-colored casket that was stamped "solid bronze." A hearse brought a huge blanket of white gardenias on which were superimposed a large bunch of white orchids.

These were the only trimmings.

Capone died January 25 in his palatial but mortgaged home at Miami Beach, Fla., where he had received the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church. He died from pneumonia following an apoplectic stroke.

Removal of Capone's body to Chicago took place under unusual secrecy. The family declined to discuss when the body would arrive or when the service would be held. The body was brought to Mt. Olivet by hearse last Saturday morning and members of the family arrived the same day by train.

15 Ohio Ministers Get Power To Make Arrest In Vice War

STEUBENVILLE, O., Feb. 4 (AP)—Fifteen ministers crusading against vice announced today that, by forming an organization under a state charter, they had obtained power to make arrests anywhere in Ohio.

Unable to obtain police powers from the city council, they formed the "Society for the Prevention of Crime, Inc."

The authority for establishing the society springs from laws enacted by the Ohio Legislature many years ago and aimed principally at the apprehension and conviction of horse thieves.

Plea To Avoid Liquor Evaded By Lawmakers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—With emphasis on vodka, the Methodist Board of Temperance called on world leaders and congressmen today to abstrain from drinking liquor because "theirs is not a task for alcohol-pickled brains."

On Capitol Hill, congressmen shied like frightened horses from commenting on the plea for pledges.

"After all," said one legislator, "I have both drys and wets in my district and I can't win by commenting on this. The best I could do under the circumstances is to continue voting dry and drinking wet."

Bill Would

allow judges in Maryland courts to issue binding instructions on trial juries as a matters of law. The constitution now provides that juries of both fact and law in deciding cases and judges may not offer instructions on legal questions. The sponsor, Delegate James (D-Harford), said this was contrary to procedure in most other states.

Another proposed amendment by Sen. Kimble (R-Allegany), Senate minority leader, would provide that changes of venue might be caught in any civil suits if showing could be made that fair trials could not be had in the courts in question. A change of venue now is sought only in criminal trials.

Baltimore county commissioners would be allowed to decree day-light time next summer under a bill sponsored by the Baltimore county delegation. Baltimore city approved fast time at a referendum last November.

The House passed ten of its own bills and passed finally three Senate bills.

Most of the House measures dealt with insurance laws — one to allow Maryland companies to take retaliatory action on companies who discriminate against them in other states; and another to require publication of insurance company abstracts only once a year, instead of three consecutive times as now requires.

will take more than a yes or no answer."

"Well, what are your convictions on Communist doctrine?" McKellar asked.

"My convictions are not so much about what I'm against as what I'm for," Lilienthal said. "Democracy is an affirmative doctrine rather than a negative one.

"I conceive the Constitution of the United States to rest on the fundamental proposition of the integrity of the individual, and that all public and private institutions must be founded to protect the integrity and dignity of individuals.

"Any form of government which makes men the means rather than the end, which exalts government over men, is contrary to this concept and I am deeply opposed to it. The Communistic philosophy and the Communistic form of government fall within this category.

Labor Opposes Plans To Change Md. Jobless Act

Baltimore Groups Support Proposals

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4—(AP)—Representatives of organized labor turned out in force today to oppose projected amendments to the state unemployment compensation act designed to tighter up administration of jobless benefits.

Appearing at a hearing of the State Senate Finance Committee, the union leaders directed their hardest attacks against an amendment which would require applicants for benefits to show they were "actively seeking work," before they became eligible for payments.

Under the present statute a claimant need merely to be "available" for work and is not required to seek a job personally.

Proponents of Proposal

Proponents of the suggested amendments included William S. Wilson, Jr., legislative representative of the Baltimore Association of Commerce; J. W. Mehling, secretary of the Baltimore Retail Merchants Association, and J. Marshal Stewart, representing the Maryland Motor Truck Association.

Mehling told the committee that he believed members of the unemployment compensation board had "done a good" job but that their hands had been tied by "certain deficiencies" in the law.

Wilson said that "for the life of me I can't understand how any labor man could oppose the requirement that a claimant must actively seek work. Actively seeking work doesn't mean anything other than that Joe Doakes is out of a job and is trying to find work. There is no difficulty in interpreting that."

He said that "under the present law, there's no incentive to seek a job and that's a mistake."

AFL and CIO Oppose

Among those registering opposition to the proposed amendments were representatives of the AFL, CIO, two railroad organizations and the National Lawyers Guild.

I. Duke Avnet, of the National Lawyers Guild, set the tenor for the rest of the opponents appearing at the hearing when he contended the proposals sought to reduce benefits, lower the reserve fund and ultimately undermine the unemployment insurance system.

Among other things, the amendment would require a one week's waiting period before filing claims and the start of benefits, reduce the minimum payments from $7 to $6 per week, and disqualify claimants who had been discharged for a dishonest or criminal act.

AFL Opens Attack On Ball's Labor Bill

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP) — The AFL, claiming a new peak membership of 7,505,446, today opened a fierce attack on Sen. Ball's bill to outlaw the closed shop, saying it would be unconstitutional and unjustified "on moral and economic grounds."

AFL President William Green, at a news conference between sessions of the 15-man executive council, said the proposal of the Minnesota Republican Senator was "fantastic" and would lead to chaotic labor-management relations.

The Bill would prohibit employers from entering into a closed shop agreement—to hire only union members—and also would outlaw other union security provisions now accepted in labor-management contracts, such as firing any worker who does not remain in good standing in a union for the duration of the contract.

To Miss Parley Opening

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Sens. Vandenberg (R-Mich) and Connally (D-Tex), mainstays of James F. Byrnes' bi-partisan international team, will be absent when the new Secretary of State, George C. Marshall, goes into his first Big Four conference in Moscow.

Both pleaded pressing business at home today in announcing that they will not be there for the start of the meetings March 10. They said Marshall agreed with them, and they promised to go later if needed.

Committee Approves President Tenure Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — (AP) — A constitutional amendment limiting any President to a maximum of eight years in the White House won overwhelming approval today of the House Judiciary Committee.

Its action by a 20 to 6 vote—with six Democrats dissenting—followed rejection of a proposal to limit presidents to one six-year term.

Why can cook book cookery be such a mystery—particularly for younger cooks? It's so exasperating to follow the directions of an inviting recipe right down to the letter and then have the cake fall flat, or the roast wither and shrink, or the pie turn soggy and sag.

When fancy dishes flop, do you ever ask: "Who dunnit?"

You can't pin the crime on the butler . . . so Mama blames the cook book and Papa suspects the cook, but the real culprit is very likely to be incorrect timing and temperature control.

When the cook book calls for an oven heat of 350°, or 200°, or 500°—just set the thermostat and rest assured that the spacious gas oven will cook evenly throughout and at just the right temperature.

When the cook book specifies quick pre-heating, or tells you to quickly bring to a boil : : : you have the new, high-speed giant burner to do your bidding. Or when modern cooking methods instruct you to cook vegetables very slowly in just a little water : : : use the handy simmer burners. "Bedrock" Policy On Arms Cutting Is Given By U. S.

Depends On Treaties, Effective Safeguards

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP)—The United States, in a "bedrock" declaration of policy, served notice today that world arms limitation depended primarily on the peace treaties with Germany and Japan and the creation of an effective United Nations force to keep the peace.

Warren R. Austin, former Republican Senator from Vermont and chief United States delegate to the United Nations, told the United Nations Security Council that those factors were the "most important" elements which must be considered in world arms regulation and reduction.

Austin made it clear to the council that he spoke after consultation with the highest leaders of his government. After the meeting he said his declaration was the "bedrock" policy of the United States which he would repeat as often as necessary.

Informal Huddle Scheduled

Austin and the delegates of five other countries, including Soviet Russia, will go into an informal huddle tomorrow (11 a. m. EST) in an attempt to draft a resolution setting up an arms reduction commission that the council will accept. The other delegates are from Australia, Belgium, Colombia and France.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate, lined up with Austin in the afternoon session.

Paul Hasluck, Australian delegate, said he could not accept the United States nor the Russian proposals and suggested the six delegates get together in an attempt to draft an acceptable resolution. After some jockeying, the council decided upon that course and adjourned at 4:50 p. m. EST.

It was apparent that all delegates were agreed there should be a commission to draw up recommendations for the council on world arms limitation and reduction of armed forces. Several delegates pointed out the only differences are on minor points.

Long-Awaited Declaration

Austin made his long-awaited declaration, the first policy statement he has made in the council since Gen. George C. Marshall became Secretary of State, to 10 closely-attentive delegations and a packed council chamber.

He thus introduced to the Security Council the new idea that it must keep an eye on the Moscow peace talks in shaping its arms cutting program.

He and Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko agreed on the proposition that the commission must be set up to prepare recommendations for the council but they disagreed on the best approach to the problem. The council must decide.

"Dinky Railroad" Strike At J. And L. Plant Ends

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 4 (AP)—A rent in the amicable pattern of contract negotiations between the CIO-United Steel Workers and the steel industry was repaired successfully today when an unauthorized strike which had idled 3,500 in a big Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation mill at Aliquippa was called off.

Only 18 workers on a "dinky railroad" within the plant were engaged directly in the five-day walkout but their strike in dispute over safety measures disrupted plant operations, causing layoffs of 3,482 other workers.

The railroad workers returned to their jobs today after the firm had notified union contract negotiators yesterday that wage-and-hour talks were suspended until the dispute at Aliquippa "is satisfactorily settled."

Private Funeral Service In Wind-Swept Cemetery Completes Capone Legend

CHICAGO, Feb. 4 (AP)—A private funeral service in a tent in a frozen, wind-swept cemetery today completed the legend of Al Capone.

The gangland czar, who personified the era of bloody lawlessness that reached its peak in the twilight of prohibition, was buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery with fewer than two score persons looking on.

Although denied a requiem mass, Capone was buried in the family plot in consecrated ground. Msgr. William Gorman, formerly the Capone family's priest, conducted the simple services in a wind-whipped tent erected over the grave.

Msgr. Gorman earlier told newsmen, "the (Roman Catholic) church never condones evil, nor the evil in any man's life. This very brief ceremony is to recognize his (Capone's) penitence and the fact he died fortified by the sacraments of the church."

Capone's wife, Mae; his mother, Theresa; his brother, Ralph, and his son, Buddy, and two other women attended the brief services.

More than a score of men who declined to reveal their names or submit to photographs were at the ceremony. Old time newsmen said they recognized several of them as members of the old Capone gang.

Capone, who buried his important friends and enemies in a burst of garish splendor, once would have scoffed at the simplicity accorded his own funeral.

Al was placed in a silver-colored casket that was stamped "solid bronze." A hearse brought a huge blanket of white gardenias on which were superimposed a large bunch of white orchids.

These were the only trimmings.

Capone died January 25 in his palatial but mortgaged home at Miami Beach, Fla., where he had received the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church. He died from pneumonia following an apoplectic stroke.

Removal of Capone's body to Chicago took place under unusual secrecy. The family declined to discuss when the body would arrive or when the service would be held. The body was brought to Mt. Olivet by hearse last Saturday morning and members of the family arrived the same day by train.

15 Ohio Ministers Get Power To Make Arrest In Vice War

STEUBENVILLE, O., Feb. 4 (AP)—Fifteen ministers crusading against vice announced today that, by forming an organization under a state charter, they had obtained power to make arrests anywhere in Ohio.

Unable to obtain police powers from the city council, they formed the "Society for the Prevention of Crime, Inc."

The authority for establishing the society springs from laws enacted by the Ohio Legislature many years ago and aimed principally at the apprehension and conviction of horse thieves.

Plea To Avoid Liquor Evaded By Lawmakers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—With emphasis on vodka, the Methodist Board of Temperance called on world leaders and congressmen today to abstrain from drinking liquor because "theirs is not a task for alcohol-pickled brains."

On Capitol Hill, congressmen shied like frightened horses from commenting on the plea for pledges.

"After all," said one legislator, "I have both drys and wets in my district and I can't win by commenting on this. The best I could do under the circumstances is to continue voting dry and drinking wet."

The constitution now provides that juries of both fact and law in deciding cases and judges may not offer instructions on legal questions. The sponsor, Delegate James (D-Harford), said this was contrary to procedure in most other states.

Another proposed amendment by Sen. Kimble (R-Allegany), Senate minority leader, would provide that changes of venue might be caught in any civil suits if showing could be made that fair trials could not be had in the courts in question. A change of venue now is sought only in criminal trials.

Baltimore county commissioners would be allowed to decree day-light time next summer under a bill sponsored by the Baltimore county delegation. Baltimore city approved fast time at a referendum last November.

The House passed ten of its own bills and passed finally three Senate bills.

Most of the House measures dealt with insurance laws — one to allow Maryland companies to take retaliatory action on companies who discriminate against them in other states; and another to require publication of insurance company abstracts only once a year, instead of three consecutive times as now requires.

Labor Opposes Plans To Change Md. Jobless Act

Baltimore Groups Support Proposals

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4—(AP)—Representatives of organized labor turned out in force today to oppose projected amendments to the state unemployment compensation act designed to tighter up administration of jobless benefits.

Appearing at a hearing of the State Senate Finance Committee, the union leaders directed their hardest attacks against an amendment which would require applicants for benefits to show they were "actively seeking work," before they became eligible for payments.

Under the present statute a claimant need merely to be "available" for work and is not required to seek a job personally.

Proponents of Proposal

Proponents of the suggested amendments included William S. Wilson, Jr., legislative representative of the Baltimore Association of Commerce; J. W. Mehling, secretary of the Baltimore Retail Merchants Association, and J. Marshal Stewart, representing the Maryland Motor Truck Association.

Mehling told the committee that he believed members of the unemployment compensation board had "done a good" job but that their hands had been tied by "certain deficiencies" in the law.

Wilson said that "for the life of me I can't understand how any labor man could oppose the requirement that a claimant must actively seek work. Actively seeking work doesn't mean anything other than that Joe Doakes is out of a job and is trying to find work. There is no difficulty in interpreting that."

He said that "under the present law, there's no incentive to seek a job and that's a mistake."

AFL and CIO Oppose

Among those registering opposition to the proposed amendments were representatives of the AFL, CIO, two railroad organizations and the National Lawyers Guild.

I. Duke Avnet, of the National Lawyers Guild, set the tenor for the rest of the opponents appearing at the hearing when he contended the proposals sought to reduce benefits, lower the reserve fund and ultimately undermine the unemployment insurance system.

Among other things, the amendment would require a one week's waiting period before filing claims and the start of benefits, reduce the minimum payments from $7 to $6 per week, and disqualify claimants who had been discharged for a dishonest or criminal act.

AFL Opens Attack On Ball's Labor Bill

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP) — The AFL, claiming a new peak membership of 7,505,446, today opened a fierce attack on Sen. Ball's bill to outlaw the closed shop, saying it would be unconstitutional and unjustified "on moral and economic grounds."

AFL President William Green, at a news conference between sessions of the 15-man executive council, said the proposal of the Minnesota Republican Senator was "fantastic" and would lead to chaotic labor-management relations.

The Bill would prohibit employers from entering into a closed shop agreement—to hire only union members—and also would outlaw other union security provisions now accepted in labor-management contracts, such as firing any worker who does not remain in good standing in a union for the duration of the contract.

To Miss Parley Opening

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP)—Sens. Vandenberg (R-Mich) and Connally (D-Tex), mainstays of James F. Byrnes' bi-partisan international team, will be absent when the new Secretary of State, George C. Marshall, goes into his first Big Four conference in Moscow.

Both pleaded pressing business at home today in announcing that they will not be there for the start of the meetings March 10. They said Marshall agreed with them, and they promised to go later if needed.

Committee Approves President Tenure Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — (AP) — A constitutional amendment limiting any President to a maximum of eight years in the White House won overwhelming approval today of the House Judiciary Committee.

Its action by a 20 to 6 vote—with six Democrats dissenting—followed rejection of a proposal to limit presidents to one six-year term.

Advice To The Lovelorn

Man Has Been Trying For Eight Years To Break Up Another's Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

One of the most extraordinary letters I have ever received comes from a man who has been trying, for eight years, to think up ways in which he could win another man's wife away from him. Because he has not been able to succeed, so far, he now writes me as follows:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I want you to help me, please. I am 43 years old, have never been married and am very much in love with a lady around my age, only she is married.

"I have known this lady for eight years. I know I shouldn't feel this way about her, but I just can't help it. From the first time I saw her, I had a flame start in my heart which has never gone out.

"I talked with her a number of times. She treats me nicely, but will not encourage me any because she feels she owes her life to her husband. I tell you I am so much in love with her, I would do almost anything if in any way I could win her. I never saw her for five years after the first time I saw her, but she was in my dreams and never left my mind. I think of her constantly. She is one of the most desirable humans on earth. I have heard that her husband is not too good to her.

"Miss Fairfax, do you think there will ever be any hope for me? I am most miserable. You know women do leave their husbands for other men. I will never be able to forget this lady, even though she has begged me to, under the circumstances. Otherwise, I believe she could love me. I tell you I have tried for eight years to forget her and I can't. I want her more than anything on earth.

"MISERABLE"

I am extremely sorry for you, "Miserable," for two reasons: One, you have my sympathy for the suffering you are apparently undergoing, and, two—and an entirely different kind of thing—you have my sympathy because you seem not to have the character to determine not to suffer this way any more.

You surely can't seriously expect me to lay down a plan for you by which you could proceed to lure another man's wife away from him. Nor can I understand how you could seriously want to do such a thing, especially in view of the fact that this woman has begged you to let her alone. Obviously, she wishes to do the right thing. Why should you try to make her do a wrong one to satisfy this distorted romantic passion of yours?

As nearly as I can judge from what you say, you don't really know this woman at all. As I understand it, in some way she captured your imagination at the first meeting, and since then you have allowed your imagination to fasten itself on her and weave fantasies which picture her as your wife. Now you have allowed the thing to get such a hold on you that it would be very difficult for you, I am sure, to shake it off.

Obviously, you have not yet arrived at a point where you really wish to try and shake it off. You say that you "have tried for eight years to forget her," but it is quite evident that, at the same time, you keep trying to think of some way in which you could get her.

The only advice that I can give you, and I very much doubt if you will take it, would be to make up your mind, once and for all, that you will not pursue this obsession any longer and will work toward putting her out of your mind entirely and interesting yourself in other people and other things. As I have already said, it will doubtless be difficult for you to do, since you have allowed this thing to go so far. If it were in any way possible, I would suggest that you see a psychiatrist who would be in a position to help you in straightening yourself out.

Man Has Been Trying For Eight Years To Break Up Another's Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

One of the most extraordinary letters I have ever received comes from a man who has been trying, for eight years, to think up ways in which he could win another man's wife away from him. Because he has not been able to succeed, so far, he now writes me as follows:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I want you to help me, please. I am 48 years old, have never been married and am very much in love with a lady around my age, only she is married.

"I have known this lady for eight years. I know I shouldn't feel this way about her, but I just can't help it. From the first time I saw her, I had a flame start in my heart which has never gone out.

"I talked with her a number of times. She treats me nicely, but will not encourage me any because she feels she owes her life to her husband. I tell you I am so much in love with her, I would do almost anything if in any way I could win her. I never saw her for five years after the first time I saw her, but she was in my dreams and never left my mind. I think of her constantly. She is one of the most desirable humans on earth. I have heard that her husband is not too good to her.

"Miss Fairfax, do you think there will ever be any hope for me? I am most miserable. You know women do leave their husbands for other men. I will never be able to forget this lady, even though she has begged me to, under the circumstances. Otherwise, I believe she could love me. I tell you I have tried for eight years to forget her and I can't. I want her more than anything on earth.

"MISERABLE"

I am extremely sorry for you, "Miserable," for two reasons: One, you have my sympathy for the suffering you are apparently undergoing, and, two—and an entirely different kind of thing—you have my sympathy because you seem not to have the character to determine not to suffer this way any more.

You surely can't seriously expect me to lay down a plan for you by which you could proceed to lure another man's wife away from him. Nor can I understand how you could seriously want to do such a thing, especially in view of the fact that this woman has begged you to let her alone. Obviously, she wishes to do the right thing. Why should you try to make her do a wrong one to satisfy this distorted romantic passion of yours?

As nearly as I can judge from what you say, you don't really know this woman at all. As I understand it, in some way she captured your imagination at the first meeting, and since then you have allowed your imagination to fasten itself on her and weave fantasies which picture her as your wife. Now you have allowed the thing to get such a hold on you that it would be very difficult for you, I am sure, to shake it off.

Obviously, you have not yet arrived at a point where you really wish to try and shake it off. You say that you "have tried for eight years to forget her," but it is quite evident that, at the same time, you keep trying to think of some way in which you could get her.

The only advice that I can give you, and I very much doubt if you will take it, would be to make up your mind, once and for all, that you will not pursue this obsession any longer and will work toward putting her out of your mind entirely and interesting yourself in other people and other things. As I have already said, it will doubtless be difficult for you to do, since you have allowed this thing to go so far. If it were in any way possible, I would suggest that you see a psychiatrist who would be in a position to help you in straightening yourself out.

Tax Exemption Controversy Finds Way To Circuit Court

A bill introduced in the Maryland General Assembly by Senator Robert B. Kimble, would, possibly, if enacted into law, put an end to a long-standing practice of exempting from taxation industries in Allegany County. This action, to be sure, has come too late to prevent exemption of the Kelly Springfield Tire Company from payment of levies on tools and machinery for at least five years, unless the Circuit Court finds that, as charged by James H. Reed, a taxpayer, the County Commissioners violated a provision of a Maryland law dealing with exemptions. The petitioner contends the law prohibits the granting of third exemptions to any one company or corporation.

This action has been filed "on behalf of the complainant and all similarly situated taxpayers" in Allegany County. The Court has ordered the Commissioners to show cause on or before February 20 why the petition should not be granted.

When the County Commissioners denied an exemption to the Kelly Company a year ago it was generally accepted as establishing a policy. On that occasion, as was the case this year, the request by the Kelly company for tax exemption was opposed by Commissioner Wilkinson, an employe of the petitioning firm, and with the aid of Commissioner Lemmert's vote he accomplished that in which he failed a year ago—exempting the company. Mr. Reed, in his petition to the Court, contends Commissioner Wilkinson violated his oath by not disqualifying himself from taking action on the order, and cites the fact his vote was necessary for the passage of that order.

Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert, in the recent transaction, argued that the Kelly company should be granted the same privileges as that enjoyed by the Celanese Corporation of America and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company. While it is true that some acts of one board of commissioners may not be binding on incoming boards (and the exemption action might be one), it was a generally accepted belief that it was the desire of the commissioners to have succeeding boards deny those companies further exemptions when their present tax-free periods expired, and the refusal of the board a year ago to grant the Kelly company further exemption was taken for granted as putting the others on notice that they would be refused.

The rank and file of taxpayers are against further exemptions of any part of industries from taxation, and they certainly had a right to believe the custom was being brought to an orderly end. They find it difficult to agree with Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert that the Kelly exemption was justified.

It might be pointed out that the businesses of the three concerns enjoying tax exemptions are not competitive in nature, and therefore no financial disadvantage would be suffered by one over the other had the Kelly request been denied. But those who must pay taxes are placed at a disadvantage because the exemption granted the Kelly company comes at a time when the county is finding it difficult to unearth additional revenue without further tapping the pocketbooks of homeowners to meet the demands of various departments of the county government.

Those departments are finding it almost impossible to function on present-day budgets, and the increased costs of operation must be met to some extent. The approximate $42,000 the Kelly company is excused from paying to the county in each of the next five years would aid to some degree in meeting these costs.

On the other hand, the amount that will be denied the county by the action of Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert will give the Kelly company little financial relief, (if that were needed), because, as Commissioner Holmes pointed out in voting against the exemption, much of the amount the company will not have to pay the county must be paid the Federal government—assessments no company or individual can escape paying.

Certainly the Kelly company is not depending on this saving to permit it to continue operations, because the amount it is exempted from paying is but peanuts to such a corporation. But the loss of this revenue, with the resultant increase in the tax rate the county commissioners may find themselves obliged to place on other taxpayers could force many, especially homeowners, to give up their properities because of their inability to meet this increased cost. And an increased tax rate certainly will not encourage building of homes, so badly needed.

That other industries in Cumberland and elsewhere in the county have not seized upon the opportunity to ask the same exemption privileges on their tools and machinery as is enjoyed by the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, the Celanese Corporation of America and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, is indeed fortunate. It is difficult to see how they could be refused under the line of reasoning advanced by Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert in the case of the Kelly company.

That certainly would make necessary increasing

Some Truth In Belief Public Oversold On Flying

There is an element of truth in the comment of Secretary of Commerce Harriman that the public has been oversold on the air age. In an excess of enthusiasm, writers on aviation have given people an exaggerated idea of the degree of safety and reliability which may be expected from air travel at the present time. The inability of aviation to live up to these great expectations has added to the sense of disillusionment and shock which the present series of air tragedies has caused.

These crashes have led, quite understandably, to an insistent demand for safer air travel. But they should not be permitted to overshadow the truly amazing progress which aviation has made during its comparatively brief career.

Men have been flying for only a little more than a generation but in that period they have gone a long way toward conquest of this new element. As Secretary Harriman says, "It may be shown that commercial flying on scheduled, domestic air lines is more than twice as safe as riding in an automobile over comparative distances."

That is still far from safe enough, but no one talks about giving up riding in automobiles despite the tens of thousands of persons killed in highway crashes every year. Trains are not leaving stations with empty passenger coaches as a result of the recent series of railroad wrecks.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

ELBOW INJURIES

THE elbow is difficult to describe without recourse to anatomical drawings. The structure is made up of three bones. The humerus, which forms the upper arm, is one part of the hinge. On its inside is found the tiny notch known colloquially as the "funnybone." The lower portion of the elbow is composed of the radius and the ulnar, which extend thruout the forearm The funny-bone is particularly sensitive because of its vulnerable location and the face that it is next to a large nerve. When the region is struck or pinched, a peculiar sensation spreads down the arm into the hand.

As with the knee the elbow moves in only one direction. The range cannot be extended beyond 180 degrees nor flexed to less than 30 degrees. The hinge is held together by powerful muscular and fibrous supports but can be dislocated or fractured by a direct blow or when the individual falls so that all his weight is borne on the outstretched hand. Healing may not follow immobilization in a cast or spline, and operation is required. Furthermore, nearby nerves and blood vessels sometimes are damaged, leading to unpleasant complications.

One of the common disabilities is tennis elbow. The term includes numerous afflictions of the joint resulting from accidents which were described initially in tennis players. Altho many tissues can be involved, specialists usually are able to distinguish one from another. For example, when the hinge which is made up of the humerus and radius is impaired [radiohumeral synovitis], the victim complains of pain on the outside which is aggravated by grasping an object or making a fist and often points to a spot that is tender to the touch.

As the condition progresses, weakness in the forearm becomes evident so that objects like a cup, glass, or razor are dropped. Others have difficulty in performing the finer movements of the hand and forearm as buttoning the shirt, tying the tie, or writing. Many state that with certain motions there is a grating sensation which in some instances can actually be heard.

Stack has devised a test to determine whether this area in tennis elbow is involved. The victim is able to pick up a heavy book such as a dictionary or telephone directory by placing the fingers under the volume and the thumb above. When the maneuver is reversed, however, and the thumb is below and the fingers above, weakness and pain are so severe that the task cannot be performed.

In many cases the trouble does not lie within the joint but is due to injury or strain of the tendons and muscles which surround the structure, Distress is noticeable whenever the arm is bent repeatedly, especially in casting and retrieving of a fly by the fisherman, the use of a screwdriver, the wringing of clothes, or the tennis player's gymnastics. Now and then the only sign is swelling because of fluid in and about the joints spaces [bursitis].

Practically all disorders of this type clear up if the movements which produce pain are avoided. Too often the subject bends the elbow periodically to see if it still hurts. In so doing insult is added to injury. By keeping the extremity in a sling and the frequent application of heat by means of hot packs or diathermy, relief follows within four weeks. In others, depending upon the cause, surgery is required to remove redundant, frayed, or detached ligaments or membranes. These abnormalities would never disappear spontaneously, regardless of rest or external applications.

Picking Winners

The Better Business Bureau has been sending out warnings of late telling people not to listen to touts who want to give them "sure" tips on the races. It had to do something about the touts at Santa Anita . . . They were tearing too many lapels off of people.

You know what a tout is . . . That's a guy who comes around with a hot horse, grabs you by the elbow and starts singing, "Open the wallet Richard.

Personally, when I go to the races, I don't need anyone to give me tips. I can lose my money without a technical advisor.

The last time I was at the track a fellow gave me a horse he said was a "sleeper." He was, too. In fact, he was disqualified at the starting gate for snoring.

I have a new system now for picking my horses. I spread the racing form out in front of me, bite into my hot dog, and whichever name the mustard splashes on, I bet.

But racing is big business. Louis B. Mayer is going to auction off his stable of horses, valued at five million dollars. He needs the money. He is trying to rent an apartment.

But those big name horses really live high. Max Factor does their currying, Adrian knits blankets for them, and they live in Honduras mahogany stalls with hot and cold running oats.

But so many people are going to Santa Anita these days they're thinking of doing away with horses. They are just going to let the customers make bets on the number of survivors.

It's wonderful going out there now . . . It's so crowded you can't get your hand into your pocket to take out any dough to lose.

General Marshall Moves Fast; Republicans Ponder How To Cut 1,000,000 Government Workers; They Have Been Unable, So Far, To Find The Answer

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. — Those who have watched General Marshall close-up think he has made an excellent, fast-moving start as secretary of state. However, they still have their fingers crossed. Too many "new brooms" have come into the State Department before. They rarely sweep out the corners, seldom get the dust out from under diplomatic rugs. In his brief tenure, however, Marshall has:

1.) Named able, sometimes timid Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson as chief of staff with complete authority to cleanse the department.

2.) Backed up Spruille Braden's position that Argentina must purge the Nazis. Simultaneously, Marshall avoided an unpleasant situation with windy Ambassador George Messersmith.

(3.) Pledged his firm belief that the State Department is a civilian agency and should be run by civilians, not brasshats. To this end, Marshall has told intimates he will bring no generals or regular army men into the State Department.

4.) Moved to solve one thorny United Nations headache—the atom bomb. Without appearing to do so, he's eased tension on the red-hot atomic-energy issue, so long debated in New York.

Diplomats Agog

Secretary Marshall's breath-taking pace has set the usually staid Washington diplomatic corps afire. Diplomats who rarely stir from their offices can now be seen whispering at cocktail parties, bouncing around hotel luncheon tables comparing notes on the significance of Marshall's every move. The diplomatic cables have been cluttered with memoranda from Washington embassies analyzing the new secretary of state.

Marshall upset members of the British colony by holding his first lengthy diplomatic talk with Soviet Ambassador Novikov, not Britain's Lord Inverchapel.

Later, Marshall met the new Polish ambassador. The interview lasted seven minutes. Marshall said hello, made it bluntly clear that the United States regards the latest Polish election as a joke, sent him trotting on his way. Marshall was equally decisive on the Chinese crisis, landed a haymaker on Chiang Kai-Shek's chin by announcing the recall of U. S. troops, which, in effect, have been helping the Kuomintang fight the communists.

Cabled Stalin

Marshall has served notice that he'll deal with only a maximum of eight top State Department officials daily. This may or may not be a good thing, since it's dangerous for a secretary of state to get too isolated. He wants all memos written on a single page, will countenance no undercutting by subordinates. Many a stuffed shirt who played hard and fast with Ed Stettinius' innocence or Jimmy Byrnes' good nature now will find himself reduced to the rear echelon.

Marshall wants to conserve his strength for the one big battle ahead —working out a permanent peace with Russia. Marshall knows the Russians, has dealt with them before. Now he's determined to make one final effort to reach agreement on all issues from Germany to the Dardanelles. If the Russians meet him halfway, there'll be peace. If they don't, the world will know plainly who is to blame. Marshall already has cabled Stalin for a full-dress talk in Moscow next March.

NOTE—One Marshall error was to let able, hard-hitting Joe Panuch resign as deputy assistant secretary of state for administration. Panuch knows government inside-out, did a bang-up job of administration despite little cooperation from the career cliqhe. Now that he has left, Marshall has already reversed one Byrnes decision which is a victory for Panuch. He soon will move the State Department to more efficient quarters several blocks from the department's present location next to the White House. This was a Panuch proposal.

How To Prune 1,000,000 People

Though G.O.P. Congressmen Jorn Taber of New York and Harold Knutson of Minnesota boasted that government personnel could be reduced by 1,000,000 employes, neither congressman was able to answer the $64 question as to where the personnel cuts could be made. The question was lengthily debated at the closed meeting of the joint budget committee, but nobody could answer it.

Taber harped at length on public relations employes throughout the government—"propagandists," he called them who should be purged at once from the payroll. But, outside or that, he and Knutson had little to offer the committee. At one point, Democratic Congressman John Dingell of Michigan broke in on the New York Republican:

"All right, I'm willing to be educated," he said. "I don't want any nonessential employees sponging on the taxpayers. But suppose you tell us where all of them are."

"Most of them are in the War Department," replied Taber. "How about all those civilian employees with our occupation forces overseas? There are about 300,000, I understand."

Taber held that the 300,000, mostly war veterans, should be discharged and replaced by citizens of occupied countries, who could be recruited without pay.

"Why not put some of the people in occupied countries to work so they can earn their keep?" Taber demanded.

Put Nazis To Work

"Do I understand the gentleman clearly?" inquired Dingell acidly. "Does he want the United States Army to employ aliens?"

Committee colleagues roared while the New Yorker groped for a reply. Dingell went on to explain that most of the civilian overseas jobs, including military government work, had to be filled by "tried and true" Americans for security reasons.

"Well, I suppose we have to have our own people in some of these jobs," grumbled Taber, "but I still think we ought to get some work out of these citizens in the occupied areas. We are keeping a lot of them for nothing."

Representative Albert Gore of Tennessee and other Democrats also objected to the Taber-Knutson "meat-ax" approach to personnel trimming.

"The Army, Navy and Veterans Administration will make reductions as swiftly as possible without coercion," one of them declared. "We can't do the job now with a meat-ax without crippling the government and at a risk to security in some cases."

Budget Director James Webb expressed the same view. He testified that Veterans Administrator Omar Bradley already had been cut below his personnel requirements to handle the vast flow of service insurance business, G.I. terminal leave applications and hospital maintenance.

"Well, where can cuts be made?" said Knutson. "Give us some clues. You are in a position to know about such things."

Taber, Rep. Dan Reed of New York and Sen. Eugene Millikin of Colorado joined in the demands for "clues" from Webb, but the budget director refused to be put on the spot. He contended that his bureau makes a practice of keeping a close check on the payrolls of federal departments and agencies and recommends cuts wherever possible. These recommendations always have been followed, he said.

However, Knutson continued to pump the budget director like a police witness withholding information. Finally Tennessee's Congressman Gore angrily demanded a halt.

"It is not within Mr. Webb's province to answer questions like that," he declared. "This is a legislative problem. It is up to us, not the Budget Bureau, to determine where personnel reductions can and should be made."

Power Always Corrupts; Moral Decadence That Follows Cited

By SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL

The demand made by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder on ex-Secretary Morgenthau for the return of 800 volumes of an alleged "diary," as the property of the United States, highlights the moral decadence that always follows in the train of too much power held too long. "Power always corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely."

The sound instinct of the American people with respect to government has never been better shown than in their traditional opposition to too-long tenure of public office. Not only are elections frequent in time and non-postponable, but our state constitutions are full of absolute prohibitions against governors, etc., being elected for more than one or two terms.

In time, public officials ease themselves into the pleasing notion that public property becomes their private property. They extend their perquisites and emoluments. They begin to dip their fingers into the till.

Argument for Amendment

The Snyder-Morgenthau incident should be a strong argument for a constitutional amendment forbidding any President from holding office for more than one or two terms. The Presidential office should be like the honor of Caesar's wife.

Elliott Roosevelt is just back from interviewing Stalin. Young Roosevelt holds no office in our government. We do have, however, an ambassador in Moscow. He is the one through whom the exchange of views on international policy should flow. And as they flow (unless secret), they should become the public property of all the American people. Instead, Elliott Roosevelt, using his father's prestige, obtains from Stalin statements laudatory of his father and, by implication, critical of President Truman. The interview appears in a magazine. The gain to Elliott Roosevelt is not reported.

Harry Hopkins sold magazine articles repeatedly material for which he gathered only as a paid official of this government. Cabinet officials have been charged with using government planes for private vacations. In national parks, Cabinet officials have had the use of palatial cottages for a pittance per month. The naval hospital in Washington has been used by scores of officials to obtain medical and surgical care costing heavy money to the taxpayer, but token money only to the patient.

"Public Papers and Addresses" in nine volumes, have been privately printed, bearing the words "Copyright by Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Eight members of the President's family were appointed by him to public office

Sons Feathered Their Nests

Sons of a president have feathered their nests in insurance, aviation and motion pictures. Wives of public officials have received costly jewels for smashing champagne on big and little boats. Even fur coats, the gifts of foreign governments, and costing thousands of dollars, have been in the news. Battleships have been given away as if they were the personal baubles of a king. Stamps, libraries, personal shrines—who knows the whole story? Then we have the Garsson-May stench—and how many more?

Justice Brandeis once said: "Our government is the potent, the omipresent teacher. For good or ill, it reaches the whole people by its example. Crime is contageous."

When a family has been exposed to a contagious disease, a good housewife fumigates! By all means, let's fumigate!

New Liberalism Coming Back To America Through Republicans

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — A new liberalism is coming back to America through the Republican Congress.

Instead of sitting by and letting judicial "interpretation" take away fundamental rights which were reserved to the people under the Constitution, the new Congress is going to let the people decide how and when they want to change the Constitution.

At least two important constitutional amendments have been introduced—one limiting presidential tenure to two terms of four years each and the other prescribing that all federal justices shall hold office for ten years and be subject to reappointment by the President and confirmation by the Senate.

The new proposal for a change in the life tenure of Justices has just been introduced by Representative Lawrence H. Smith, Republican, of Wisconsin, who has served several years in the House and is one of its able members.

It is proposed that the Justices, including those of the Supreme Court, shall be checked periodically by the people after ten years of service and that present Justices shall not serve beyond ten years after they took the oath of office or not after Dec. 31, 1948, whichever is earlier, but that they may be eligible for reappointment.

Charges Courts Have Been "Packed"

Representative Smith points out that the federal courts have been "packed" with New Dealers and that the Supreme Court, particularly in the "portal to portal" case, has been upsurging legislative functions.

It has been erroneously said by some observers that the new plan proposes to do what was condemned generally when in 1937 the late President Roosevelt—indignant over the decisions of the Justices then sitting because they refused to hold valid his New Deal laws—tried to enlarge and "pack" the court.

But what Mr. Smith proposes is the exact opposite. The Roosevelt scheme was to try to do by a statute what the Constiution forbade. The method suggested by Mr. Smith is to ask the people to change the Constitution. The idea of protesting against Supreme Court decisions is not novel. Abraham Lincoln once said Supreme Court decisions were not "irrevocable" and that the people had the final say. They do—that is, they can have the final say by utilizing the machinery prescribed in the Constitution itself.

Thus, when the Supreme Court many years ago held that an income tax could not be levied by the federal treasury, the matter was submitted to the people and by constitutional amendment they bestowed on the federal government that taxing power.

Despite the fact that centralized government in Washington has since 1933 taken over many powers which for decades were rights never before delegated to the Federal government by the people—as, for instance, control over wages and hours—not a single constitutional amendment has been submitted to the people since 1933. This is because appointees who believe in restricting the power of the people and taking away their rights have been sitting on the Supreme Court bench. And the Congress has, in effect, been in collusion with the Court because reactionary majorities have declined to submit vital issues of constitutional power to the people for their decision.

Roosevelt Ridiculed Idea

The late President Roosevelt ridiculed the idea of amending the Constitution in the way prescribed therein. In a radio address on March 9, 1937, speaking in support of his "court packing" plan, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I have thus explained to you the reasons that lie behind our efforts to secure results by legislation within the Constitution. I hope that thereby the difficult process of constitutional amendment may be rendered unnecessary. But let us examine that process.

"There are many types of amendment proposed. Each one is radically different from the other. There is no substantial group within the Congress or outside it who are agreed on any single amendment.

"It would take months or years to get substantial agreement upon the type and language of an amendment. It would take months and years thereafter to get a two-thirds majority in favor of that amendment in both Houses of Congress.

"Then would come the long course of ratification by three-fourths of all the states. No amendment which any powerful economic interests or the leaders of any powerful political party have had reason to oppose has ever been ratified within anything like a reasonable time. And thirteen states which contain only five percent of the voting population can block ratification even though the thirty-five states with ninety-five percent of the population are in favor of it."

Mr. Roosevelt forgot to tell the people that the eighteenth amendment was eliminated from the Constitution less than two years after it had been submitted to the people by two-thirds vote of both Houses of Congress. If there is serious division on any fundamental subject, of course, it is right that the matter should be delayed, but it is illiberal and reactionary to refuse to give the people a chance to amend their own constitution and to argue that all that is needed is to change the judges.

This is a Broadway love story. If you like happy endings, maybe you ought to turn to the stock-market page.

Rudolf Richter had a personality like an almond bar—sweet but nutty. He was one of our scenic designers. Whenever the script called for a stage full of gingerbread and spangles, Rudy got the job. After a producer engaged him, he would then engage somebody else to follow Rudy and see he didn't fall down a manhole.

Billy Rose

This talented zany lived on a special cloud of his own, somewhere between Graustark and the Land of Oz. The wise guys around Shubert Alley used to say that when Rudy walked past a bakery, the fruitcakes in the window would turn to each other and say, "That's the fellow I was telling you about."

Rudy worked for me, on and off, for half a dozen years. There must have been a thousand girls around the various shows he designed. Richter never saw them. As far as he was concerned, a girl was something that got in the way of his scenery.

Then, one day, Rudy fell in love with the prettiest girl in a show he had designed for me. No one thought he had a chance with this doll. Jane Morgan might have inspired the invention of Technicolor. She had hair the color of daisy centers, and eyes as green as a new dollar bill. From the backers to the assistant electrician, everybody had given her the wolf-eye.

To everybody's amazement, Jane paid plenty of attention to Rudy. The reason was simple. He asked her to marry him.

(It's always been my opinion that if Nicholas Nobody walked up to Greta Garbo and sincerely said, "I'd like to marry you," he'd get a respectful hearing. This is the one proposition a girl always has time to listen to. My wife violently disagrees with this theory).

A week after Rudy proposed, Jane married him. The day after the wedding, he told me they had rented the whole third floor of a brownstone house in the East 30's. He invited me to drop around as soon as they got settled.

A month later, I did. I was anxious to see how he had decorated his apartment. I expected something out of the Arabian Nights. Figuring she'd get a kick out of it, I took Eleanor along.

Rudy and Jane were at the door to meet us. The apartment consisted of six spacious, well-lighted rooms. I looked around, and so did Eleanor. Then we looked at each other.

There were no drapes, no carpets, no pictures. There was a telephone on the floor of the living room—and nothing else. The master bedroom had a bed—nothing else. In what would ordinarily be the dining room, Rudy had set up a plain deal table for his crayons and paint pots.

Except for the furniture I have mentioned, the apartment was bare as a bowling alley. If they ate home, it must have been off the window sill.

I could see Jane was terribly embarrassed in front of Eleanor. We made a little small talk and left as quickly as we could.

When we got out on the street, Eleanor said, "I don't get it."

"I think I do," I said. "It has nothing to do with money—he makes plenty. Rudy is a special sort of fellow. He lives in the batty world that's under his hat. We see his place as an empty apartment. With that girl in there, Rudy probably sees it as Solomon's palace. Marie Antoinette's boudoir, and the Taj Mahal."

"I don't care what he sees," said the Missus. "I'm betting the marriage won't last."

How right she was!

A couple of weeks later, Rudy came to see me.

"How's Jane?" I asked.

"Wish I knew, " said the designer. "She walked out on me last week. Can't figure it. We were so happy. And then, bang!—she runs off with another guy."

"Sorry to hear it," I said. "Who'd she go off with?"

"I don't know," said Rudy. "Some dope she met. I think he's in the furniture business."

Tax Exemption Controversy Finds Way To Circuit Court

A bill introduced in the Maryland General Assembly by Senator Robert B. Kimble, would, possibly, if enacted into law, put an end to a long-standing practice of exempting from taxation industries in Allegany County. This action, to be sure, has come too late to prevent exemption of the Kelly Springfield Tire Company from payment of levies on tools and machinery for at least five years, unless the Circuit Court finds that, as charged by James H. Reed, a taxpayer, the County Commissioners violated a provision of a Maryland law dealing with exemptions. The petitioner contends the law prohibits the granting of third exemptions to any one company or corporation.

This action has been filed "on behalf of the complainant and all similarly situated taxpayers" in Allegany County. The Court has ordered the Commissioners to show cause on or before February 20 why the petition should not be granted.

When the County Commissioners denied an exemption to the Kelly Company a year ago it was generally accepted as establishing a policy. On that occasion, as was the case this year, the request by the Kelly company for tax exemption was opposed by Commissioner Wilkinson, an employe of the petitioning firm, and with the aid of Commissioner Lemmert's vote he accomplished that in which he failed a year ago—exempting the company. Mr. Reed, in his petition to the Court, contends Commissioner Wilkinson violated his oath by not disqualifying himself from taking action on the order, and cites the fact his vote was necessary for the passage of that order.

Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert, in the recent transaction, argued that the Kelly company should be granted the same privileges as that enjoyed by the Celanese Corporation of America and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company. While it is true that some acts of one board of commissioners may not be binding on incoming boards (and the exemption action might be one), it was a generally accepted belief that it was the desire of the commissioners to have succeeding boards deny those companies further exemptions when their present tax-free periods expired, and the refusal of the board a year ago to grant the Kelly company further exemption was taken for granted as putting the others on notice that they would be refused.

The rank and file of taxpayers are against further exemptions of any part of industries from taxation, and they certainly had a right to believe the custom was being brought to an orderly end. They find it difficult to agree with Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert that the Kelly exemption was justified.

It might be pointed out that the businesses of the three concerns enjoying tax exemptions are not competitive in nature, and therefore no financial disadvantage would be suffered by one over the other had the Kelly request been denied. But those who must pay taxes are placed at a disadvantage because the exemption granted the Kelly company comes at a time when the county is finding it difficult to unearth additional revenue without further tapping the pocketbooks of homeowners to meet the demands of various departments of the county government.

Those departments are finding it almost impossible to function on present-day budgets, and the increased costs of operation must be met to some extent. The approximate $42,000 the Kelly company is excused from paying to the county in each of the next five years would aid to some degree in meeting these costs.

On the other hand, the amount that will be denied the county by the action of Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert will give the Kelly company little financial relief, (if that were needed), because, as Commissioner Holmes pointed out in voting against the exemption, much of the amount the company will not have to pay the county must be paid the Federal government—assessments no company or individual can escape paying.

Certainly the Kelly company is not depending on this saving to permit it to continue operations, because the amount it is exempted from paying is but peanuts to such a corporation. But the loss of this revenue, with the resultant increase in the tax rate the county commissioners may find themselves obliged to place on other taxpayers could force many, especially homeowners, to give up their properities because of their inability to meet this increased cost. And an increased tax rate certainly will not encourage building of homes, so badly needed.

That other industries in Cumberland and elsewhere in the county have not seized upon the opportunity to ask the same exemption privileges on their tools and machinery as is enjoyed by the Kelly Springfield Tire Company, the Celanese Corporation of America and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, is indeed fortunate. It is difficult to see how they could be refused under the line of reasoning advanced by Commissioners Wilkinson and Lemmert in the case of the Kelly company.

That certainly would make necessary increasing

Some Truth In Belief Public Oversold On Flying

There is an element of truth in the comment of Secretary of Commerce Harriman that the public has been oversold on the air age. In an excess of enthusiasm, writers on aviation have given people an exaggerated idea of the degree of safety and reliability which may be expected from air travel at the present time. The inability of aviation to live up to these great expectations has added to the sense of disillusionment and shock which the present series of air tragedies has caused.

These crashes have led, quite understandably, to an insistent demand for safer air travel. But they should not be permitted to overshadow the truly amazing progress which aviation has made during its comparatively brief career.

Men have been flying for only a little more than a generation but in that period they have gone a long way toward conquest of this new element. As Secretary Harriman says, "It may be shown that commercial flying on scheduled, domestic air lines is more than twice as safe as riding in an automobile over comparative distances."

That is still far from safe enough, but no one talks about giving up riding in automobiles despite the tens of thousands of persons killed in highway crashes every year. Trains are not leaving stations with empty passenger coaches as a result of the recent series of railroad wrecks.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

ELBOW INJURIES

THE elbow is difficult to describe without recourse to anatomical drawings. The structure is made up of three bones. The humerus, which forms the upper arm, is one part of the hinge. On its inside is found the tiny notch known colloquially as the "funnybone." The lower portion of the elbow is composed of the radius and the ulnar, which extend thruout the forearm The funny-bone is particularly sensitive because of its vulnerable location and the face that it is next to a large nerve. When the region is struck or pinched, a peculiar sensation spreads down the arm into the hand.

As with the knee the elbow moves in only one direction. The range cannot be extended beyond 180 degrees nor flexed to less than 30 degrees. The hinge is held together by powerful muscular and fibrous supports but can be dislocated or fractured by a direct blow or when the individual falls so that all his weight is borne on the outstretched hand. Healing may not follow immobilization in a cast or spline, and operation is required. Furthermore, nearby nerves and blood vessels sometimes are damaged, leading to unpleasant complications.

One of the common disabilities is tennis elbow. The term includes numerous afflictions of the joint resulting from accidents which were described initially in tennis players. Altho many tissues can be involved, specialists usually are able to distinguish one from another. For example, when the hinge which is made up of the humerus and radius is impaired [radiohumeral synovitis], the victim complains of pain on the outside which is aggravated by grasping an object or making a fist and often points to a spot that is tender to the touch.

As the condition progresses, weakness in the forearm becomes evident so that objects like a cup, glass, or razor are dropped. Others have difficulty in performing the finer movements of the hand and forearm as buttoning the shirt, tying the tie, or writing. Many state that with certain motions there is a grating sensation which in some instances can actually be heard.

Stack has devised a test to determine whether this area in tennis elbow is involved. The victim is able to pick up a heavy book such as a dictionary or telephone directory by placing the fingers under the volume and the thumb above. When the maneuver is reversed, however, and the thumb is below and the fingers above, weakness and pain are so severe that the task cannot be performed.

In many cases the trouble does not lie within the joint but is due to injury or strain of the tendons and muscles which surround the structure. Distress is noticeable whenever the arm is bent repeatedly, especially in casting and retrieving of a fly by the fisherman, the use of a screwdriver, the wringing of clothes, or the tennis player's gymnastics. Now and then the only sign is swelling because of fluid in and about the joints spaces [bursitis].

Practically all disorders of this type clear up if the movements which produce pain are avoided. Too often the subject bends the elbow periodically to see if it still hurts. In so doing insult is added to injury. By keeping the extremity in a sling and the frequent application of heat by means of hot packs or diathermy, relief follows within four weeks. In others, depending upon the cause, surgery is required to remove redundant, frayed, or detached ligaments or membranes. These abnormalities would never disappear spontaneously, regardless of rest or external applications.

Picking Winners

The Better Business Bureau has been sending out warnings of late telling people not to listen to touts who want to give them "sure" tips on the races. It had to do something about the touts at Santa Anita . . . They were tearing too many lapels off of people.

You know what a tout is . . . That's a guy who comes around with a hot horse, grabs you by the elbow and starts singing, "Open the wallet Richard.

Personally, when I go to the races, I don't need anyone to give me tips. I can lose my money without a technical advisor.

The last time I was at the track a fellow gave me a horse he said was a "sleeper." He was, too. In fact, he was disqualified at the starting gate for snoring.

I have a new system now for picking my horses. I spread the racing form out in front of me, bite into my hot dog, and whichever name the mustard splashes on, I bet.

But racing is big business. Louis B. Mayer is going to auction off his stable of horses, valued at five million dollars. He needs the money. He is trying to rent an apartment.

But those big name horses really live high. Max Factor does their currying, Adrian knits blankets for them, and they live in Honduras mahogany stalls with hot and cold running oats.

But so many people are going to Santa Anita these days they're thinking of doing away with horses. They are just going to let the customers make bets on the number of survivors.

It's wonderful going out there now . . . It's so crowded you can't get your hand into your pocket to take out any dough to lose.

General Marshall Moves Fast; Republicans Ponder How To Cut 1,000,000 Government Workers; They Have Been Unable, So Far, To Find The Answer

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4. — Those who have watched General Marshall close-up think he has made an excellent, fast-moving start as secretary of state. However, they still have their fingers crossed. Too many "new brooms" have come into the State Department before. They rarely sweep out the corners, seldom get the dust out from under diplomatic rugs. In his brief tenure, however, Marshall has:

1.) Named able, sometimes timid Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson as chief of staff with complete authority to cleanse the department.

2.) Backed up Spruille Braden's position that Argentina must purge the Nazis. Simultaneously, Marshall avoided an unpleasant situation with windy Ambassador George Messersmith.

(3.) Pledged his firm belief that the State Department is a civilian agency and should be run by civilians, not brasshats. To this end, Marshall has told intimates he will bring no generals or regular army men into the State Department.

4.) Moved to solve one thorny United Nations headache—the atom bomb. Without appearing to do so, he's eased tension on the red-hot atomic-energy issue, so long debated in New York.

Diplomats Agog

Secretary Marshall's breath-taking pace has set the usually staid Washington diplomatic corps afire. Diplomats who rarely stir from their offices can now be seen whispering at cocktail parties, bouncing around hotel luncheon tables comparing notes on the significance of Marshall's every move. The diplomatic cables have been cluttered with memoranda from Washington embassies analyzing the new secretary of state.

Marshall upset members of the British colony by holding his first lengthy diplomatic talk with Soviet Ambassador Novikov, not Britain's Lord Inverchapel.

Later, Marshall met the new Polish ambassador. The interview lasted seven minutes. Marshall said hello, made it bluntly clear that the United States regards the latest Polish election as a joke, sent him trotting on his way. Marshall was equally decisive on the Chinese crisis, landed a haymaker on Chiang Kai-Shek's chin by announcing the recall of U. S. troops, which, in effect, have been helping the Kuomintang fight the communists.

Cabled Stalin

Marshall has served notice that he'll deal with only a maximum of eight top State Department officials daily. This may or may not be a good thing, since it's dangerous for a secretary of state to get too isolated. He wants all memos written on a single page, will countenance no undercutting by subordinates. Many a stuffed shirt who played hard and fast with Ed Stettinius' innocence or Jimmy Byrnes' good nature now will find himself reduced to the rear echelon.

Marshall wants to conserve his strength for the one big battle ahead —working out a permanent peace with Russia. Marshall knows the Russians, has dealt with them before. Now he's determined to make one final effort to reach agreement on all issues from Germany to the Dardanelles. If the Russians meet him halfway, there'll be peace. If they don't, the world will know plainly who is to blame. Marshall already has cabled Stalin for a full-dress talk in Moscow next March.

NOTE—One Marshall error was to let able, hard-hitting Joe Panuch resign as deputy assistant secretary of state for administration. Panuch knows government inside-out, did a bang-up job of administration despite little cooperation from the career cliqhe. Now that he has left, Marshall has already reversed one Byrnes decision which is a victory for Panuch. He soon will move the State Department to more efficient quarters several blocks from the department's present location next to the White House. This was a Panuch proposal.

How To Prune 1,000,000 People

Though G.O.P. Congressmen Jorn Taber of New York and Harold Knutson of Minnesota boasted that government personnel could be reduced by 1,000,000 employes, neither congressman was able to answer the $64 question as to where the personnel cuts could be made. The question was lengthily debated at the closed meeting of the joint budget committee, but nobody could answer it.

Taber harped at length on public relations employes throughout the government—"propagandists," he called them who should be purged at once from the payroll. But, outside or that, he and Knutson had little to offer the committee. At one point, Democratic Congressman John Dingell of Michigan broke in on the New York Republican:

"All right, I'm willing to be educated," he said. "I don't want any nonessential employees sponging on the taxpayers. But suppose you tell us where all of them are."

"Most of them are in the War Department," replied Taber. "How about all those civilian employees with our occupation forces overseas? There are about 300,000, I understand."

Taber held that the 300,000, mostly war veterans, should be discharged and replaced by citizens of occupied countries, who could be recruited without pay.

"Why not put some of the people in occupied countries to work so they can earn their keep?" Taber demanded.

Put Nazis To Work

"Do I understand the gentleman clearly?" inquired Dingell acidly. "Does he want the United States Army to employ aliens?"

Committee colleagues roared while the New Yorker groped for a reply. Dingell went on to explain that most of the civilian overseas jobs, including military government work, had to be filled by "tried and true" Americans for security reasons.

"Well, I suppose we have to have our own people in some of these jobs," grumbled Taber, "but I still think we ought to get some work out of these citizens in the occupied areas. We are keeping a lot of them for nothing."

Representative Albert Gore of Tennessee and other Democrats also objected to the Taber-Knutson "meat-ax" approach to personnel trimming.

"The Army, Navy and Veterans Administration will make reductions as swiftly as possible without coercion," one of them declared. "We can't do the job now with a meat-ax without crippling the government and at a risk to security in some cases."

Budget Director James Webb expressed the same view. He testified that Veterans Administrator Omar Bradley already had been cut below his personnel requirements to handle the vast flow of service insurance business, G.I. terminal leave applications and hospital maintenance.

"Well, where can cuts be made?" said Knutson. "Give us some clues. You are in a position to know about such things."

Taber, Rep. Dan Reed of New York and Sen. Eugene Millikin of Colorado joined in the demands for "clues" from Webb, but the budget director refused to be put on the spot. He contended that his bureau makes a practice of keeping a close check on the payrolls of federal departments and agencies and recommends cuts wherever possible. These recommendations always have been followed, he said.

However, Knutson continued to pump the budget director like a police witness withholding information. Finally Tennessee's Congressman Gore angrily demanded a halt.

"It is not within Mr. Webb's province to answer questions like that," he declared. "This is a legislative problem. It is up to us, not the Budget Bureau, to determine where personnel reductions can and should be made."

Power Always Corrupts; Moral Decadence That Follows Cited

By SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL

The demand made by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder on ex-Secretary Morgenthau for the return of 800 volumes of an alleged "diary," as the property of the United States, highlights the moral decadence that always follows in the train of too much power held too long. "Power always corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely."

The sound instinct of the American people with respect to government has never been better shown than in their traditional opposition to too-long tenure of public office. Not only are elections frequent in time and non-postponable, but our state constitutions are full of absolute prohibitions against governors, etc., being elected for more than one or two terms.

In time, public officials ease themselves into the pleasing notion that public property becomes their private property. They extend their perquisites and emoluments. They begin to dip their fingers into the till.

Argument for Amendment

The Snyder-Morgenthau incident should be a strong argument for a constitutional amendment forbidding any President from holding office for more than one or two terms. The Presidential office should be like the honor of Caesar's wife.

Elliott Roosevelt is just back from interviewing Stalin. Young Roosevelt holds no office in our government. We do have, however, an ambassador in Moscow. He is the one through whom the exchange of views on international policy should flow. And as they flow (unless secret), they should become the public property of all the American people. Instead, Elliott Roosevelt, using his father's prestige, obtains from Stalin statements laudatory of his father and, by implication, critical of President Truman. The interview appears in a magazine. The gain to Elliott Roosevelt is not reported.

Harry Hopkins sold magazine articles repeatedly material for which he gathered only as a paid official of this government. Cabinet officials have been charged with using government planes for private vacations. In national parks, Cabinet officials have had the use of palatial cottages for a pittance per month. The naval hospital in Washington has been used by scores of officials to obtain medical and surgical care costing heavy money to the taxpayer, but token money only to the patient.

"Public Papers and Addresses" in nine volumes, have been privately printed, bearing the words "Copyright by Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Sons Feathered Their Nests

Sons of a president have feathered their nests in insurance, aviation and motion pictures. Wives of public officials have received costly jewels for smashing champagne on big and little boats. Even fur coats, the gifts of foreign governments, and costing thousands of dollars, have been in the news. Battleships have been given away as if they were the personal baubles of a king. Stamps, libraries, personal shrines—who knows the whole story? Then we have the Garsson-May stench—and how many more?

Justice Brandeis once said: "Our government is the potent, the omipresent teacher. For good or ill, it reaches the whole people by its example. Crime is contageous."

New Liberalism Coming Back To America Through Republicans

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—A new liberalism is coming back to America through the Republican Congress.

Instead of sitting by and letting judicial "interpretation" take away fundamental rights which were reserved to the people under the Constitution, the new Congress is going to let the people decide how and when they want to change the Constitution.

At least two important constitutional amendments have been introduced—one limiting presidential tenure to two terms of four years each and the other prescribing that all federal justices shall hold office for ten years and be subject to reappointment by the President and confirmation by the Senate.

The new proposal for a change in the life tenure of Justices has just been introduced by Representative Lawrence H. Smith, Republican, of Wisconsin, who has served several years in the House and is one of its able members.

It is proposed that the Justices, including those of the Supreme Court, shall be checked periodically by the people after ten years of service and that present Justices shall not serve beyond ten years after they took the oath of office or not after Dec. 31, 1948, whichever is earlier, but that they may be eligible for reappointment.

Charges Courts Have Been "Packed"

Representative Smith points out that the federal courts have been "packed" with New Dealers and that the Supreme Court, particularly in the "portal to portal" case, has been upsurging legislative functions.

It has been erroneously said by some observers that the new plan proposes to do what was condemned generally when in 1937 the late President Roosevelt—indignant over the decisions of the Justices then sitting because they refused to hold valid his New Deal laws—tried to enlarge and "pack" the court.

But what Mr. Smith proposes is the exact opposite. The Roosevelt scheme was to try to do by a statute what the Constitution forbade. The method suggested by Mr. Smith is to ask the people to change the Constitution. The idea of protesting against Supreme Court decisions is not novel. Abraham Lincoln once said Supreme Court decisions were not "irrevocable" and that the people had the final say. They do—that is, they can have the final say by utilizing the machinery prescribed in the Constitution itself.

Thus, when the Supreme Court many years ago held that an income tax could not be levied by the federal treasury, the matter was submitted to the people and by constitutional amendment they bestowed on the federal government that taxing power.

Despite the fact that centralized government in Washington has since 1933 taken over many powers which for decades were rights never before delegated to the Federal government by the people—as, for instance, control over wages and hours—not a single constitutional amendment has been submitted to the people since 1933. This is because appointees who believe in restricting the power of the people and taking away their rights have been sitting on the Supreme Court bench. And the Congress has, in effect, been in collusion with the Court because reactionary majorities have declined to submit vital issues of constitutional power to the people for their decision.

Roosevelt Ridiculed Idea

The late President Roosevelt ridiculed the idea of amending the Constitution in the way prescribed therein. In a radio address on March 9, 1937, speaking in support of his "court packing" plan, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I have thus explained to you the reasons that lie behind our efforts to secure results by legislation within the Constitution. I hope that thereby the difficult process of constitutional amendment may be rendered unnecessary. But let us examine that process.

"There are many types of amendment proposed. Each one is radically different from the other. There is no substantial group within the Congress or outside it who are agreed on any single amendment.

"It would take months or years to get substantial agreement upon the type and language of an amendment. It would take months and years thereafter to get a two-thirds majority in favor of that amendment in both Houses of Congress.

"Then would come the long course of ratification by three-fourths of all the states. No amendment which any powerful economic interests or the leaders of any powerful political party have had reason to oppose has ever been ratified within anything like a reasonable time. And thirteen states which contain only five percent of the voting population can block ratification even though the thirty-five states with ninety-five percent of the population are in favor of it."

Mr. Roosevelt forgot to tell the people that the eighteenth amendment was eliminated from the Constitution less than two years after it had been submitted to the people by two-thirds vote of both Houses of Congress. If there is serious division on any fundamental subject, of course, it is right that the matter should be delayed, but it is illiberal and reactionary to refuse to give the people a chance to amend their own constitution and to argue that all that is needed is to change the judges.

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

This is a Broadway love story. If you like happy endings, maybe you ought to turn to the stock-market page.

Rudolf Richter had a personality like an almond bar—sweet but nutty. He was one of our scenic designers. Whenever the script called for a stage full of gingerbread and spangles, Rudy got the job. After a producer engaged him, he would then engage somebody else to follow Rudy and see he didn't fall down a manhole.

Billy Rose

This talented zany lived on a special cloud of his own, somewhere between Graustark and the Land of Oz. The wise guys around Shubert Alley used to say that when Rudy walked past a bakery, the fruitcakes in the window would turn to each other and say, "That's the fellow I was telling you about."

Rudy worked for me, on and off, for half a dozen years. There must have been a thousand girls around the various shows he designed. Richter never saw them. As far as he was concerned, a girl was something that got in the way of his scenery.

Then, one day, Rudy fell in love with the prettiest girl in a show he had designed for me. No one thought he had a chance with this doll. Jane Morgan might have inspired the invention of Technicolor. She had hair the color of daisy centers, and eyes as green as a new dollar bill. From the backers to the assistant electrician, everybody had given her the wolf-eye.

To everybody's amazement, Jane paid plenty of attention to Rudy. The reason was simple. He asked her to marry him.

(It's always been my opinion that if Nicholas Nobody walked up to Greta Garbo and sincerely said, "I'd like to marry you," he'd get a respectful hearing. This is the one proposition a girl always has time to listen to. My wife violently disagrees with this theory).

A week after Rudy proposed, Jane married him. The day after the wedding, he told me they had rented the whole third floor of a brownstone house in the East 30's. He invited me to drop around as soon as they got settled.

A month later, I did. I was anxious to see how he had decorated his apartment. I expected something out of the Arabian Nights. Figuring she'd get a kick out of it, I took Eleanor along.

Rudy and Jane were at the door to meet us. The apartment consisted of six spacious, well-lighted rooms. I looked around, and so did Eleanor. Then we looked at each other.

There were no drapes, no carpets, no pictures. There was a telephone on the floor of the living room—and nothing else. The master bedroom had a bed—nothing else. In what would ordinarily be the dining room, Rudy had set up a plain deal table for his crayons and paint pots.

Except for the furniture I have mentioned, the apartment was bare as a bowling alley. If they ate home, it must have been off the window sill.

I could see Jane was terribly embarrassed in front of Eleanor. We made a little small talk and left as quickly as we could.

When we got out on the street, Eleanor said, "I don't get it."

"I think I do," I said. "It has nothing to do with money—he makes plenty. Rudy is a special sort of fellow. He lives in the batty world that's under his hat. We see his place as an empty apartment. With that girl in there, Rudy probably sees it as Solomon's palace, Marie Antoinette's boudoir, and the Taj Mahal."

"I don't care what he sees," said the Missus. "I'm betting the marriage won't last."

How right she was!

A couple of weeks later, Rudy came to see me.

"How's Jane?" I asked.

"Wish I knew," said the designer. "She walked out on me last week. Can't figure it. We were so happy. And then, bang!—she runs off with another guy."

"Sorry to hear it," I said. "Who'd she go off with?"

"I don't know," said Rudy. "Some dope she met. I think he's in the furniture business."

LEVELERS OF LIFE

There are three institutions that no town or city should be without—an Art Centre of some sort, a Public Library, and some form of Public Musical Culture. These institutions will keep more people happy and content, and out of jail, than any others.

Create incentive for the finer things in life among people, and they will find no time for wasteful and evil enterprises. Go into any Public Library and note the seriousness upon every face. Go to any Art Gallery and note the quiet, meditative mood that the visitors reflect. And who does not love music in some form or other? The town band of the small village is welcomed and loved by all. A new, great singer appeared in New York recently in Opera, and the enthusiasm for him and his wonderful performance made people fairly leap from their seats with bravos and enthusiasm. The entire house seemed electrified by his voice. Even the critics were warmed anew!

These enrichers of the mind and spirit are levelers of life—lifting it up and often pulling it down to an even keel, where human feelings abide.

When trouble comes, disappointment, and sorrow, we need spiritual ozone to enliven us anew. Inspired reading, great art and sublime music soothe and strengthen us, give us hope and confidence, and pour mellowness into our hearts. Cultural enterprises are what give character to human beings and to nations. They are far more important than material progress.

I recently visited the National Gallery of Art, in Washington, D. C. Thousands visit that great institution daily — and they are people from all walks of life. The poorest can walk in and drink from the fountain of beauty that the great of all time have created, and by which benefactors have been enriched in their gifts to the people. And this is true of every such institution in so many of our cities. How poor indeed is that city that cannot offer its people a fine Library, or an Art or Music centre!

Books stay with one. Our imagined friends too often desert us. The memories of beauty and the melodies of music remain with us forever.

Rev. Ray L. Henthorne, pastor of the First Christian Church, was the guest speaker and used "Spiritual Meaning of Stewardship," as his topic. He explained that to be a steward of God, one must be faithful to Him; give because of love of Him; and have a motive for stewardship. The speaker urged his audience to be partners with God and let time, one's talents and treasures be used as an index to one's character.

Mrs. Davidson Benson offered the devotionals on "Stewards of Jesus." In closing the group sang, "Saviour Thy Dying Love," and Rev. William A. Eisenberger pronounced the benediction. Yes, there's a difference—a certain something that makes Hagan Ice Cream your most delicious treat. It's no secret; it comes from the finest, purest, most costly ingredients.

We're old-fashioned that way! We won't compromise Hagan quality an inch. These days of high ingredient costs, it's a temptation for the ice cream manufacturer to skimp on the costly items. We haven't. And we won't.

It's a temptation for dealers, too—a temptation to buy a cheaper ice cream. But Hagan dealers aren't that way. They take pride in serving you the finest products; they've built their businesses that way.

So remember: there is a difference in ice cream and in ice cream dealers—and a Hagan dealer is a quality dealer.

Liquor Law Appeal Case Set For Today

An appeal case which will decide the legality of the Allegany County liquor Control Law of 1933, is scheduled to open in th eMaryland Court of Appeals at Annapolis this morning.

The case, filed to challenge the constitutionality of the county law, was instituted in Circuit Court last year by Eldred A. Cromwell, owner of Elda Inn, Braddock Road, against Clerk of Court Robert Jackson, on the contention that the clerk refused to issue a liquor license under the old 1894 "saloon law."

A hearing was held in the local court, before Associate Judge Joseph D. Mish, of Hagerstown, last year. Judge Mish upheld the 1933 act, and Cromwell's atorneys filed an appeal.

Cromwell's atorneys include Edward J. Ryan, this city, and S. Neal Park, Westminster, former judge of the Court of Appeals.

Attorneys for Jackson include Morgan C. Harris, state's attorney; William C. Walsh, former attorney general, and D. Lindley Sloan, former chief judge of the Court of Appeals.

Carloadings Increase

Carloadings on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for the month of January, 1947, totaled 277,792. This included 176,437 cars loaded on line and 101,355 cars received from connections. It was the highest January peacetime total of carloadings for the B. & O. in history since the 290,792 loads recorded for January, 1929.

During January, 1946, the total was 270,766, with 170,522 loaded on line and 100,244 received from connections. For December, 1946, the total was 262,782, comprising 165,778 loaded on line and 97,004 received from connections.

Bernard R. Cole, 188 Mozelle Street, Keyser, W. Va., 18 months unassigned.

Permit To Construct Residence Granted

Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, granted a permit yesterday to Charles Foy, Mt. Savage, to build a one-story four-room house on lots No. 279-280, Cabell avenue, at an estimated cost of $800.

Foy applied for the permit January 22 but Rizer delayed granting the application because there is no sewer at that point and the nearest water main is on Roberts street. The Mayor and Council gave him power to act in the matter, however, when he brought the matter up at a council meeting January 27.

The structure will measure 20 by 24 feet, with a concrete block foundation, frame walls covered with composition shingles, and a composition roof. Work will be done by the owner.

Madam Pavlowa, Russian dancer, was trained at the Imperial School of Dancing at Leningrad, and later by Cecchetti, director of the Imperial School of Warsaw, for three years. All other pupils were excluded during this time. She first visited America in 1910.

In 1930 domestice airlines burned 11,456,065 gallons of gasoline; in 1944 they burned 88,143,632 gallons.

B & O Orders 4,000 More Coal Cars

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP)—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad disclosed today it had ordered construction of 4,000 50-ton steel hopper cars whose builders have promised initial deliveries by July.

The railroad said the Bethlehem Steel Company would construct 2,000, the American Car and Foundry Company 1,000 and the Pressed Steel Car Company and the Ralston Steel Car Company each 500.

In addition, the B. and O. said it has another 4,000 hopper cars on order.

Safety Record Set By Gas Firm Drivers

Drivers of trucks and automobiles operated by Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company in the Cumberland tri-state area contributed to a new safe driving record in 1946, according to a report issued yesterday.

W. H. Adams, the company's safety director, said that gas company vehicles in the Pittsburgh group of the Columbia System bettered the 1945 mark by being involved in less than one accident for every 100,000 miles of operation. Truck and automobile travel in the group amounted to 5,824,495 miles.

Ringer Is Sentenced

Jasper Harvey Ringer, Jr., 25, Kingwood, W. Va., who had been sought on a charge of stealing a car from Ralph Pritts in Oakland on January 21, was sentenced to 18 months in the Maryland House of Correction Monday at Upper Marlboro on charges of carrying concealed weapons and assault.

Prince Georges County Police reported that Ringer has been convicted of similar charges near Cumberland and added he was serving time in the Maryland penitentiary when pardoned by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

State Police have placed a detainer against Ringer in connection with the larceny of the automobile.

State Trooper Stops Plans For Wedding

A 13-year-old Johnstown, Pa., girl had her dreams of marriage blasted yesterday morning when a State Policeman took her and her 19-year-old husband-to-be into custody at the Court House here.

The girl, Delores DeLozier, is an attractive brunette who appears to be about 18 or 19 years of age, according to Trooper William F. Baker, who warded off Dan Cupid's arrow at the last moment. The prospective husband, John Makdad, who was recently discharged from the Army, told Trooper Baker that he and Delores had been in love for two years and that they would get married when the girl becomes of legal age.

The marriage was thwarted when the girl's mother phoned State Police here. The girl's father is a resident of this city, according to police.

Miss DeLozier was taken to the City Jail yesterday afternoon, where she was booked as being held for Maryland State Police. It was indicated tht her mother was notified, and is expected to comef or her.

Police Warn Against Unknown Salesmen

Residents just outside the city limits should be especially careful of magazine and itinerant salesmen since many have been reported working a "racket," the Cumberland Police Department said yesterday.

In some cases salesmen, who fail to register in the city take up residence in tourist cabins and work the territory immediately adjacent, where a city permit is not required, police declared.

Many persons have filed complaints at headquarters recently about salesmen accepting advance payment on articles and then not making delivery as promised.

Selected Stock Market Leaders Reach New Highs Since August

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—(AP)—Selected stock market leaders, with motors in front, reached new highs since last August in today's proceedings while most of Monday's sprinting rails slipped a shade and light profit-taking restrained many pivotals.

It was the sixth successive million-share full day although slowdowns were frequent after an active opening and the majority of extreme gains running to two points or so backed away at the close. Transfers of 1,340,000 shares compared with 1,360,000 the day before.

Selected Stock Market Leaders Reach New Highs Since August

NEW YORK, Feb. 4—(AP)—Selected stock market leaders, with motors in front, reached new highs since last August in today's proceedings while most of Monday's sprinting rails slipped a shade and light profit-taking restrained many pivotals.

It was the sixth successive million-share full day although slowdowns were frequent after an active opening and the majority of extreme gains running to two points or so backed away at the close. Transfers of 1,340,000 shares compared with 1,360,000 the day before.

Rites For Victim Of Train Mishap Held In Tunnelton

By HELEN COLLETT

PARSONS, W. Va., Feb. 4—Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon in a funeral home in Tunnelton for Edgar Armsey, 55, who was instantly killed Saturday when he was struck by a helper engine within sight of the Tunnelton railroad station. He was walking along the platform to the depot and walked so close to the edge that the helper engine coming down the track caught him and hurled him off the track.

He was born December 2, 1893, in Davis, a son of the late Elihu and Katherine Born Armsey, and resided at various times with an aunt, Mrs. Dora Barker, in Davis. He was joint owner of a taxi business in that town from 1926 until 1935 and was later a brakeman for the Western Maryland Railway. He was a veteran of World War I, having served many months in Germany. He was a member of Blue Ridge Post No. 22, American Legion, of Davis.

Mr. Armsey was the last member of a family of seven children and is survived by several aunts and uncles, including Mrs. Barker of Davis; Doc Born, Edward Born, Kasper and Elihu Born, all of Reedsville, and two nieces of Rockhaven, Pa.

Interment was in Reedsville.

Shaffer Rites Set

Funeral services will be conducted at the Mt. Cassell Church in Barbour county Wednesday at 2 p. m. for T. Lee Shaffer, 79, farmer of St. George district, who died at his home there Monday morning.

He was born November 3, 1867, in Kasson, Barbour county, a son of Jacob and Mary Wilson Shaffer. He is survived by his widow, the former Heliotrope Ashby, whom he married August 24, 1932; two children, Nina Lee and Dennis Calvin, both at home, and one sister, Mrs. Molendia Stalnaker, Greenville, O., who is the last survivor of a family of 14 children.

Rev. Frantz Casto, pastor of the Methodist Church of St. George, will officiate and interment will be in Mt. Cassell Cemetery.

Learns of Mother's Death

Patsy Santangelo, Thomas, noted musician and shoe store operator, learned this week of the death of his mother, Mrs. Micchelina Santangelo, in Roccacasale, Italy, on January 6.

Mrs. Santangelo resided in Thomas with her son from 1930 until 1937, when she returned to her native country.

McCullar Services Held

Funeral services were conducted in Thomas Monday afternoon for Mrs. Emma McCullar, 53, who died at her home there on Thursday.

She was born in Greenville, S. C., September 25, 1893, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Jones. Her husband, Charles McCullar, died in 1929.

She is survived by two sons, Richard McCullar, Thomas, and Delmore McCullar, Davis; two daughters, Mrs. Mary Chisholm, Harding, and Mrs. Daisy Hill, Weston; and one brother, William Jones.

Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery in Thomas.

Union Services To Be Held

A union caravan of Evangelism has been planned for St. John's Methodist Church with Rev. O. M. Botts as minister and the First Methodist Church with the Rev. James H. Lotspeich as minister, to be held late in March. Dr. Fred B. Wyand, superintendent of the Moorefield district, will be the guest speaker.

The first series of services will be held in First Methodist Church and the second in St. John's Church. Other out of town pastors and singers are expected to participate in the first service of its kind to be held in this county.

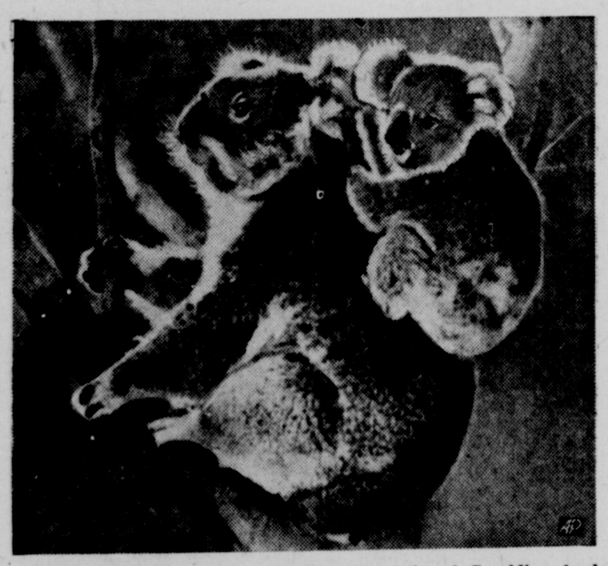
PIGGY-BACK TEDDY BEAR



MELBOURNE, Australia — Booboop, the baby of Geraldine, koala bear in the local zoo, has emerged from his mother's pouch 155 days after birth, giving scientists the first accurate check on the time these marsupial bears mature.

Koalas, which look like teddy bears, are born in a very immature state and nurse for long periods in the pouch. After emerging, the baby returns sometimes to nurse, but spends most of its time riding piggy-back for a year.

PIGGY-BACK TEDDY BEAR

MELBOURNE, Australia — Booboop, the baby of Geraldine, koala bear in the local zoo, has emerged from his mother's pouch 155 days after birth, giving scientists the first accurate check on the time these marsupial bears mature.

Koalas, which look like teddy bears, are born in a very immature state and nurse for long periods in the pouch. After emerging, the baby returns sometimes to nurse, but spends most of its time riding piggy-back for a year.

STRAWS IN THE WIND

BROADWAY

By DANTON WALKER

On the Broadway calendar the nite of Jan. 31, 1947, marked the opening of the Vanity Fair, Broadway's first major postwar nite club, and also chalked up another milestone in the history of a famous street and a famous location. On this same spot, 49th St. and Broadway, we have witnessed equally brilliant openings of two other nite clubs, the Zanzibar and the Hurricane, and before that Ziegfeld's Midnite Frolics and N. T. G.'s Paradise, each of which was to introduce some singer, dancer, comedian, bandleader or chorus beauty who was destined to make history in Gotham's gay nite life. Long before that, they tell me, this hallowed ground was the site of country fairs and carnivals; traveling troupes and troubadours pitched their tents here to entertain the buyers at the horse market across the street, where the Winter Garden Theatre now stands. In line with progress, the 20th Century Automobile Co. replaced the general store which occupied the site which was to house the Brill Brothers' first clothing store and which in turn was to make way for the 11-story building which also shelters half of Broadway's songwriters, arrangers, musicians and their agents.

Gertie Niesen

For the record, the Vanity Fair—latest venture of those intrepid young entrepreneurs, the Messrs. Joe Howard and Carl Erbe—starts off with a show headed by the sultry-voiced Gertrude Niesen. Hal LeRoy, a dancer who needs no introduction. Jan Murray, one of Broadway's newer comedians, and a bandleader from the West, Boyd Raeburn, who is making his Broadway debut. Also a dozen minor principals and a line of pretty girls, all new to the scene. (In passing, it is recalled that Gertrude (I Wanna Get Married) Niesen made one of her early cafe appearances at another room called Vanity Fair on 54th St., for which Carl Erbe acted as press agent, and her last appearance was at the Hurricane restuarant, on this same site.) Its decoration is the work of Franklin Hughes, who succeeded the late Vernon MacFarlane as the town's leading nite club decorator. The angel for the new venture is a multi-millionaire from California who enjoys writing checks.

Nils T. Granlund's Paradise, first club to occupy the new building put up by the Brills, was the sensation of the 1920's. One of Broadway's first theatre - restaurants, it was decorated at a cost of $175,000 by Josef Urban, Ziegfeld's famous Hungarian art director. In the three and a half years of its existence it catapulated to fame and fortune such talented performers and professional beauties as Adele Jergens, Grace Luce, Hope Chandler, Louis Prima, Abe Lyman, Glenn Miller, Bunny Berrigan, et al. Hope Chandler, picked as the most beautiful girl on Broadway (this columnist helped pick her) married David Hearst and retired from the scene. Under N. T. G.'s guidance, the Paradise weathered the depression as well as other vicissitudes of the cafe business and within six months paid off its backers. In 1930, N. T. G. took off for London's Dorchester House with a flock of Hollywood starlets, the Paradise fell on evil times and in 1939 shuttered its doors.

The so-called Ziegfeld Midnite Frolics, with which Ziegfeld was in nowise connected, gave Broadway a brief whirl before breathing its last and the by-now famous room at Broadway and 49th St. was darkened for the second time. A few months later another group of hopefuls reopened it as the Hurricane which made history for a time, then like its name spent itself into oblivion. Across the street was a small club called the Zanzibar (Howard and Erbe again) featuring all-colored entertainment. It proved too small for its patronage, so the Zanzibar was moved over to the now defunct Hurricane. The club presented Broadway's greatest array of Negro talent—Bill Robinson, Ethel Waters, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, Cab Calloway, Duke Ellington, the Ink Spots, Louis Armstrong, the King Cole Trio, Nicholas Brothers, Mills Brothers, Maurice Rocco, Pearl Bailey, etc.

The Zanzibar literally ran out of new Negro talent. So the Messrs. Howard and Erbe prepared to move it to a smaller location, at 1580 Broadway (across from the Strand Theatre), where it will reopen later this season with smaller, more intimate revues. Each reopening at this "Paradise" spot, it might be added, set the owners back from $50,000 to $100,000. It must truly be touched of Paradise.

WOMAN POSTS BOND IN SLOT MACHINE CASE

Mrs. Richard E. Boyden, who complained about paying federal taxes on slot machines when county officials "raided" her tavern on Mt. Savage Road, yesterday posted $200 bond in Trial Magistrates Court after she was ordered held for action of the April Grand Jury.

Sheriff's deputies last week found three slot machines in the tavern when they inspected the place and removed them to the sheriff's office where it is reported they will be destroyed. The machines, all allegedly new, were identified as five cent, 10 cent and 25 cent machines.

When the deputies began removing the machines from the tavern, Mrs. Boyden, allegedly attempted to stop them, declaring she had just paid $300 taxes to the federal government on the machines.

More Court Suits May Be Filed On Tax Exemptions

Legality Of Other Grants In Question

Additional suits protesting tax exemptions by the Allegany County Commissioner to industries, may be filed in Circuit Court here, it was reliably reported yesterday.

On Monday, Clarence Lippel, attorney for James H. Reed, filed an equity action, protesting the five-year exemption the board granted the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company on tools and machinery.

The legality of acts of the Legislature authorizing the board to grant similar exemptions to the Celanese Corporation of America and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company would be questioned in the proposed actions for a court test, it was reported.

There was no indication of the identity of the taxpayers whose names would have to be used in such court actions. Reed, a former Kelly company employe, filed the suit yesterday as a taxpayer and "on behalf of your complainant and all similarly situated taxpayers of Allegany county."

Lewis M. Wilson, attorney to the board, said an answer to the petition will be filed later. He cited that "it is entirely a question of law," as to whether the acts of the Legislature are constitutional, and the facts in the case were not the major factor of the litigation.

Commissioner Lemmert today reported that the bridge on the Midlothian Road is in need of repairs. County Engineer Albert S. Paye was asked to investigate.

Benjamin Divico advised the board that a house at 510 Springdale Street was torn down last November and asked that the assessment be removed this year. The request was granted.

The $5,000 bond of Mrs. Jennie N. Sills, county auditor, was approved by the board.

Bids Received For Work On Wiley Ford Bridge

Although four bids for the proposed remodeling job on the Wiley Ford bridge have been opened by the State Roads Commission, the contract has not been let as yet, according to G. Bates Chaires, commission engineer. The lowest bid was for $17,000.

Highest of the four bids, all from out-of-town concerns, was for $31,000. Remodeling plans call for a creosoted timber deck on the bridge with asphalt planking, which is noiseless and will eliminate the present impact on the span's structure, Chaires said. The proposed plans also call for strengthening of iron work on the bridge.

Chaires said he understands the State Roads Commission plans to advertise for bids on the proposed Eckhart stretch of Route 40 early in May.

About that time, little Buelah Marie, who had been given a bag of potato chips, spilled a handful on the floor. Little Mary Katherine, without any suggestion, ran to a corner of the jail kitchen, got a broom and dust pan, and proceeded to sweep up the chips and dispose of them in a garbage can.

Asked if she swept the floor at home, she said "Yes, but our broom is pretty old."

Hugh Hotchkiss, county probation officer who visited the home where the Fazenbakers lived said the family occupied three rooms on the second floor of an old frame house in Franklin on the outskirts of Westernport. The only heat in the apartment was from a coal-fired cooking stove. To enter the place, it was necessary to climb a long flight of outside stairs to the upper part of the building, and then open a trap door in the floor to go into the rooms.

Chief Hanlin said Fazenbaker is a coal miner employed by the Campbell Coal Company. Juvenile Court authorities investigated and found he has earned from $45 to $100 a week digging coal, but recently has not been working regularly, spending most of his time drinking. It was learned that little of the money he earned went to his family.

Mother Spent Time Drinking

Mrs. Fazenbaker was described by authorities as "spending too much time in beer parlors and other places, drinking and neglecting to care for her children.

One official yesterday commented, "now we can understand why the oldest boy, Billy, ran away from home and got into trouble."

Sheriff Muir, usually pretty genial and friendly was too upset yesterday to talk much about the case. He did say, however, "I've got these children on my hands and no place for them to sleep, and nothing to do anything with. This sort of thing is happening too often and something should be done.

Juvenile Court attaches spent all afternoon contacting various agencies in an effort to find a place for the small children.

Mrs. Elinor M. Westerfeld, executive secretary of the Allegany County Welfare Board was contacted and she explained that they have no provisions to take care of emergency situation such as this.

She told the News last night that the Welfare Board has licensed 28 foster homes in Allegany County, where 56 children are now being cared for. She explained that any family which will care for children and can pass a rigid inspection and meet state qualifications, can be licensed to care for minors. But it is not lawful, under state regulations, to just put them anywhere, even in an emergency, she explained.

Need Emergency Home

Mrs. Westerfeld declared the Board has the funds and will provide help to any family in the county which has space for emergencies of this kind. She said the Board will pay up to $50 per month as a retainer, and $1.25 per day per child for the care of such situations as this. Thus far, the board has been unable to find a family interested and qualified.

Major Elmer Wall of the Salvation Army was contacted and he was sympathetic with the situation, but explained that due to new regulations, he is prohibited from caring for children, because the Citadel is not licensed since it is not properly equipped. Mrs. Westerfeld confirmed this by saying the place is not licensed by the Welfare Board because facilities are inadequate, there are not proper provisions for children, and no fire escapes.

The Allegany Hospital had no beds and is already overcrowded.

Miss Jeanette Bonig, of Associated Charities made an effort to find a temporary home for the children, but was unsuccessful, because all her families who usually help already are housing children who needed care.

In the meantime, while the Juvenile Court and Sheriff's office battled the situation with various agencies, the four chlidren were being entertained with color books, crayons, comic papers, and finally Mrs. Orr's electric record charger, in the basement kitchen of the county jail, while Mrs. Hamburg tried to help look after them and at the same time prepare supper for about 20 prisoners in the jail.

Finally all the calls and requests for "beds just for tonight," bore fruit, and Memorial Hospital made room for the four little children.

So that's the situation.

William Fazenbaker and his wife Martha Fazenbaker are in county jail awaiting removal to state institutions where they will spend six months for neglecting their children.

Two boys, Francis and Frank, are in the county jail and must spend several years in an institution, where they will mingle with delinquents because there is no home for them here.

Three little girls, Jeanetta, Mary Katherine, and Buelah Marie, and their tiny brother, Bernard Fazenbaker, are in Memorial Hospital, wondering where they will be tonight and tomorrow night.

The parents, both the Collins and the Fazenbakers leave today to begin six months terms for contributing to the delinquency of minor children.

Kidnap Charges Against Morris Are Dismissed

A petition for the release of Edward Morris, Staunton, Va., magazine salesman, held here since last Wednesday night on a kidnaping charge, was granted yesterday in Circuit Court by Chief Judge William A. Huster and Associate Judge Henderson.

Morris was taken into custody late Wednesday night along with Wilton Whitlow, 18-year-old crippled Commerce, Ga., youth, who was identified by police as the kidnaped boy. Both were released Thursday on a joint bond of $1,000.

Following the dismissal of charges yesterday, Judge Henderson instructed Morris to take Whitlow back to see his grandparents, who swore out the warrant charging the Virginia salesman with kidnaping. Then if Whitlow, who is now 18, wants to continue traveling as a salesman, there is little that can be done about it, Judge Henderson said.

The youth who is reportedly making between $40 and $50 a week as a salesman, was instructed by the court to return to his grandparents, who reared him, "at least for a visit," and was told that he owed them an obligation and should see that they are taken care of, now that he is earning a living.

At the Olympia Hotel where Morris and Whitlow, were apprehended by City Police, following a request by Georgia authorities for their arrest, a clerk said last night, that they checked out yesterday following the hearing, but left no forwarding address.

The charges against Morris were dropped after Assistant State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher presented a telegram from Georgia authorities stating that the charges had been dropped by Whitlow's grandparents.

Both Whitlow and Morris said they talked with the grandparents Sunday and informed them that their grandson was doing well and enjoyed the work he is doing.

Morris is the overseer of a group of 15 salesmen, who travel from city to city soliciting magazine subscriptions. Whitlow, reportedly joined the group in Commerce while they were working there and has since worked in many states on the Atlantic Coast. Morris said Monday that his men had gone to Wheeling, W. Va., from here, and he expected to join them after being "cleared" here.

Coal Chute Is Stolen

West Virginia authorities are investigating the report of the Heiskell Motor Company, Ridgeley, W. Va., that a 10-foot coal chute was stolen from the company property last Friday night.

The garage reported that robbers climbed over a high fence at the rear of the property and hoisted the chute over the fence. Car wheels, tires and tubes were also taken, the firm reported.

Negro Farmer Convicted In Shooting Of Officer

ANNAPOLIS Md., Feb. 4 (AP)—The fact that William Owens, 68-year-old negro farmer, thought he was surrounded by a pack of "Virginia raiders" was not sufficient reason for him to take a potshot at them, Judge William J. McWilliams ruled in Anne Arundel County Court today.

Owens was convicted of assault with intent to kill, but sentence was deferred until he can be examined by the Board of Mental Hygiene.

"We can't have people defending watetrmelon patches with shotguns and shooting county policemen," Judge McWilliams declared.

Owens had previously pleaded innocent to a charge of shooting County Policemen John J. Burl last August 28, when a force of nine county police moved onto Owens' farm, seeking a man who reportedly had been shot.

Senatorial Vote Recount Starts In Anne Arundel

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 4 (AP) — What amounted to a third count of votes cast for Sen. Herbert R O'Conor and D. John Markey in the election in Anne Arundel county last November started today.

Attorneys for O'Conor, Democrat, and his defeated rival, Markey, Republican, whose contest instigated a recount in six counties and Baltimore city, sat down with investigators from a Senate Rules and Administration subcommittee in the Annapolis Post Office to go over all disputed ballots. They want to reduce the number that eventually will be handed to the three-man Senate subcommittee for action.

Hagerstown Doesn't Want Street Cars

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Feb. 4 (AP) —The Mayor and City Council filed an injunction suit in the Washington County Circuit Court today seeking to have the Potomac Edison Company remove the city's last two street cars from the downtown section.

The suit said that the trolley tracks and the street cars had "created a condition that is dangerous to persons and property."

The tracks are laid in the center of the city's main street and the Mayor and Council claim that traffic is tied up each time a trolley makes a trip.

Gellner To Be Questioned In Fatal Accident

Paul E. Gellner, 11 Valley Street, reported to be the driver of a truck which struck Albert G. Stevenson, 66, Frostburg, and fatally injured him, will be questioned today, State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris said.

Gellner, according to State Police was driving east on Route 40 about a mile west of Frostburg, when he struck Stevenson shortly after noon January 29. Stevenson died at 2 p. m. Sunday in Memorial Hospital.

Harris said the accident is still under investigation, and Gellner will be questioned in his office today, in an effort to clear up the case.

Following the accident, Gellner, told Trooper G. M. Rotruck that he noticed the man standing on the side of the road and sounded his horn, but declared Stevenson started across the road just as the truck approached.

Gellner stopped his truck and gave what assistance he could before the State Police ambulance arrived, Trooper Rotruck said. Stevenson was described as "hard of hearing," by the police.

More Court Suits May Be Filed On Tax Exemptions

Legality Of Other Grants In Question

Additional suits protesting tax exemptions by the Allegany County Commissioner to industries, may be filed in Circuit Court here, it was reliably reported yesterday.

On Monday, Clarence Lippel, attorney for James H. Reed, filed an equity action, protesting the five-year exemption the board granted the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company on tools and machinery.

The legality of acts of the Legislature authorizing the board to grant similar exemptions to the Celanese Corporation of America and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company would be questioned in the proposed actions for a court test, it was reported.

There was no indication of the identity of the taxpayers whose names would have to be used in such court actions. Reed, a former Kelly company employe, filed the suit yesterday as a taxpayer and "on behalf of your complainant and all similarly situated taxpayers of Allegany county."

Lewis M. Wilson, attorney to the board, said an answer to the petition will be filed later. He cited that "it is entirely a question of law," as to whether the acts of the Legislature are constitutional, and the facts in the case were not the major factor of the litigation.

Commissioner Lemmert today reported that the bridge on the Midlothian Road is in need of repairs. County Engineer Albert S. Paye was asked to investigate.

Benjamin Divico advised the board that a house at 510 Springdale Street was torn down last November and asked that the assessment be removed this year. The request was granted.

The $5,000 bond of Mrs. Jennie N. Sills, county auditor, was approved by the board.

Bids Received For Work On Wiley Ford Bridge

Although four bids for the proposed remodeling job on the Wiley Ford bridge have been opened by the State Roads Commission, the contract has not been let as yet, according to G. Bates Chaires, commission engineer. The lowest bid was for $17,000.

Highest of the four bids, all from out-of-town concerns, was for $31,000. The proposed plans also call for strengthening of iron work on the bridge.

About that time, little Buelah Marie, who had been given a bag of potato chips, spilled a handful on the floor. Little Mary Katherine, without any suggestion, ran to a corner of the jail kitchen, got a broom and dust pan, and proceeded to sweep up the chips and dispose of them in a garbage can.

Asked if she swept the floor at home, she said "Yes, but our broom is pretty old."

Hugh Hotchkiss, county probation officer who visited the home where the Fazenbakers lived said the family occupied three rooms on the second floor of an old frame house in Franklin on the outskirts of Westernport. The only heat in the apartment was from a coal-fired cooking stove. To enter the place, it was necessary to climb a long flight of outside stairs to the upper part of the building, and then open a trap door in the floor to go into the rooms.

Chief Hanlin said Fazenbaker is a coal miner employed by the Campbell Coal Company. Juvenile Court authorities investigated and found he has earned from $45 to $100 a week digging coal, but recently has not been working regularly, spending most of his time drinking. It was learned that little of the money he earned went to his family.

Mother Spent Time Drinking

Mrs. Fazenbaker was described by authorities as "spending too much time in beer parlors and other places, drinking and neglecting to care for her children.

One official yesterday commented, "now we can understand why the oldest boy, Billy, ran away from home and got into trouble."

Sheriff Muir, usually pretty genial and friendly was too upset yesterday to talk much about the case. He did say, however, "I've got these children on my hands and no place for them to sleep, and nothing to do anything with. This sort of thing is happening too often and something should be done.

Juvenile Court attaches spent all afternoon contacting various agencies in an effort to find a place for the small children.

Mrs. Elinor M. Westerfeld, executive secretary of the Allegany County Welfare Board was contacted and she explained that they have no provisions to take care of emergency situation such as this.

She told the News last night that the Welfare Board has licensed 28 foster homes in Allegany County, where 56 children are now being cared for. She explained that any family which will care for children and can pass a rigid inspection and meet state qualifications, can be licensed to care for minors. But it is not lawful, under state regulations, to just put them anywhere, even in an emergency, she explained.

Need Emergency Home

Mrs. Westerfeld declared the Board has the funds and will provide help to any family in the county which has space for emergencies of this kind. She said the Board will pay up to $50 per month as a retainer, and $1.25 per day per child for the care of such situations as this. Thus far, the board has been unable to find a family interested and qualified.

Major Elmer Wall of the Salvation Army was contacted and he was sympathetic with the situation, but explained that due to new regulations, he is prohibited from caring for children, because the Citadel is not licensed since it is not properly equipped. Mrs. Westerfeld confirmed this by saying the place is not licensed by the Welfare Board because facilities are inadequate, there are not proper provisions for children, and no fire escapes.

The Allegany Hospital had no beds and is already overcrowded.

Miss Jeanette Bonig, of Associated Charities made an effort to find a temporary home for the children, but was unsuccessful, because all her families who usually help already are housing children who needed care.

In the meantime, while the Juvenile Court and Sheriff's office battled the situation with various agencies, the four children were being entertained with color books, crayons, comic papers, and finally Mrs. Orr's electric record charger, in the basement kitchen of the county jail, while Mrs. Hamburg tried to help look after them and at the same time prepare supper for about 20 prisoners in the jail.

Finally all the calls and requests for "beds just for tonight," bore fruit, and Memorial Hospital made room for the four little children.

So that's the situation.

William Fazenbaker and his wife Martha Fazenbaker are in county jail awaiting removal to state institutions where they will spend six months for neglecting their children.

Two boys, Francis and Frank, are in the county jail and must spend several years in an institution, where they will mingle with delinquents because there is no home for them here.

Three little girls, Jeanetta, Mary Katherine, and Buelah Marie, and their tiny brother, Bernard Fazenbaker, are in Memorial Hospital, wondering where they will be tonight and tomorrow night.

The parents, both the Collins and the Fazenbakers leave today to begin six months terms for contributing to the delinquency of minor children.

Kidnap Charges Against Morris Are Dismissed

A petition for the release of Edward Morris, Staunton, Va., magazine salesman, held here since last Wednesday night on a kidnaping charge, was granted yesterday in Circuit Court by Chief Judge William A. Huster and Associate Judge Henderson.

Morris was taken into custody late Wednesday night along with Wilton Whitlow, 18-year-old crippled Commerce, Ga., youth, who was identified by police as the kidnaped boy. Both were released Thursday on a joint bond of $1,000.

Following the dismissal of charges yesterday, Judge Henderson instructed Morris to take Whitlow back to see his grandparents, who swore out the warrant charging the Virginia salesman with kidnaping. Then if Whitlow, who is now 18, wants to continue traveling as a salesman, there is little that can be done about it, Judge Henderson said.

The youth who is reportedly making between $40 and $50 a week as a salesman, was instructed by the court to return to his grandparents, who reared him, "at least for a visit," and was told that he owed them an obligation and should see that they are taken care of, now that he is earning a living.

At the Olympia Hotel where Morris and Whitlow, were apprehended by City Police, following a request by Georgia authorities for their arrest, a clerk said last night, that they checked out yesterday following the hearing, but left no forwarding address.

The charges against Morris were dropped after Assistant State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher presented a telegram from Georgia authorities stating that the charges had been dropped by Whitlow's grandparents.

Both Whitlow and Morris said they talked with the grandparents Sunday and informed them that their grandson was doing well and enjoyed the work he is doing.

Morris is the overseer of a group of 15 salesmen, who travel from city to city soliciting magazine subscriptions. Whitlow, reportedly joined the group in Commerce while they were working there and has since worked in many states on the Atlantic Coast. Morris said Monday that his men had gone to Wheeling, W. Va., from here, and he expected to join them after being "cleared" here.

Negro Farmer Convicted In Shooting Of Officer

ANNAPOLIS Md., Feb. 4 (AP)—The fact that William Owens, 68-year-old negro farmer, thought he was surrounded by a pack of "Virginia raiders" was not sufficient reason for him to take a potshot at them, Judge William J. McWilliams ruled in Anne Arundel County Court today.

Owens was convicted of assault with intent to kill, but sentence was deferred until he can be examined by the Board of Mental Hygiene.

"We can't have people defending watetrmelon patches with shotguns and shooting county policemen," Judge McWilliams declared.

Owens had previously pleaded innocent to a charge of shooting County Policemen John J. Burl last August 28, when a force of nine county police moved onto Owens' farm, seeking a man who reportedly had been shot.

Hagerstown Doesn't Want Street Cars

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Feb. 4 (AP) —The Mayor and City Council filed an injunction suit in the Washington County Circuit Court today seeking to have the Potomac Edison Company remove the city's last two street cars from the downtown section.

The suit said that the trolley tracks and the street cars had "created a condition that is dangerous to persons and property."

The tracks are laid in the center of the city's main street and the Mayor and Council claim that traffic is tied up each time a trolley makes a trip.

Gellner To Be Questioned In Fatal Accident

Paul E. Gellner, 11 Valley Street, reported to be the driver of a truck which struck Albert G. Stevenson, 66, Frostburg, and fatally injured him, will be questioned today, State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris said.

Gellner, according to State Police was driving east on Route 40 about a mile west of Frostburg, when he struck Stevenson shortly after noon January 29. Stevenson died at 2 p. m. Sunday in Memorial Hospital.

Harris said the accident is still under investigation, and Gellner will be questioned in his office today, in an effort to clear up the case.

Following the accident, Gellner, told Trooper G. M. Rotruck that he noticed the man standing on the side of the road and sounded his horn, but declared Stevenson started across the road just as the truck approached.

Gellner stopped his truck and gave what assistance he could before the State Police ambulance arrived, Trooper Rotruck said. Stevenson was described as "hard of hearing," by the police.

Frostburg Legion Opposes Closing Of College There

Support Of Other Area Posts Sought

FROSTBURG, Feb. 4 — Officers of Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion, received instructions from the membership at the regular meeting Monday night to contact ever Legion Post and Legion Auxiliary in Allegany and Garrett counties and urge them to protest against any movement to abandon Frostburg State Teachers' College, which was established here in 1902.

Citizens of Frostburg, a Legion official pointed out, have been compelled from the time the school was opened here until the present time, to put up a fight to secure sufficient funds to maintain the institution and to provide for the construction of buildings now on the campus.

The present buildings include administration building, opened in 1902; present science hall, completed in 1912; residence hall, completed in 1914; addition to residence hall, completed in 1924; the buildings containing the auditorium and gymnasium and heating plant, completed in 1928, and the newest building, the college elementary school, completed in 1934.

In addition to this group of buildings, the college has a combined campus and athletic field with an area of 7½ acres. The portion of the campus used as an athletic field was acquired as WPA project. The land was formerly the site of a large number of homes of local Negro residents who were moved out of the area during 1935 and 1936, after the state acquired title to the property, to make room for the present athletic field which is adequate for football and soccer and satisfactory for college baseball.

One of the spectacular fights in the interest of the college was made by William A. Gunter, during his term of office as state senator, when he had the entire General Assembly of Maryland adjourn for a day and come to Frostburg in 1929 to make an inspection of the college and reach a decision on the proposed closing of Oak street, which at that time divided the college buildings from the present athletic field. The members of the General Assembly voted to close the street.

Members of the American Legion and other local groups have written to the Secretary of State for copies of the report of the Maryland Commission on Higher Education, submitted to Governor Lane last week and containing comments concerning the college. The object in securing the report is to learn the facts before making future plans in behalf of the college.

The fire company responded promptly and after fighting the flames for nearly two hours, they were brought under control. The lobby was not damaged but the interior of the theater was badly damaged by the flames, which seemed to have started on the stage back of the curtain. The loss was estimated by Fire Chief Norman Fike to be approximately $10,000.

Buy Band Uniforms

During the past week a representative of a prominent manufacturer of band uniforms was in Meyersdale taking measurements of members of the Meyersdale Community Band, sponsored by Friendship Lodge 67 of the Loyal Order of Moose. Following a discussion of various styles the group voted to purchase a high-waisted short jacket style uniform, to be made in gold gabardine, with black decorations across the chest. The high-waisted trousers will be of black with gold stripes down the seams. A shake type hat with a pompon was also chosen to match the suit.

Mrs. Leo Durst was named as drum majorette of the band, for whom a specially designed uniform will be made. Approximately 25 members of the organization were measured following a recent rehearsal. Others returning from college for the summer will be measured at a local store, as will new members joining the band.

Officers of the Moose Club, with members of the band, are discussing ways and means so that the local musical organization, under the directorship of Director Nat LaCavera, may have a full program during the summer and autumn months.

LITTLE BIG PINEY KNOCKS 'EM COLD

AP Newsfeatures

BIG PINEY, Wyo. — This cold, little Wyoming mountain town makes the newspapers more often probably than any other small town in the country.

It isn't at all uncommon for stories about weather conditions throughout the nation to include the statement that "the coldest spot in the country was Big Piney, Wyo., with 20 degrees below zero."

Now the Weather Bureau has come up with an explanation of why the 241 residents of this cattle-raising community enjoy the distinction of being the "nation's icebox."

The Weather Bureau blames it on a "cold air drainage" off the mountains lying to the west of the town which is situated in a mountain valley of 6,820 feet altitude.

"Masses of cold air drain off the mountain range into the valley just like streams of water," the Weather Bureau explained.

"There is also an elevation to the east. This enclosure prevents the wind from sweeping out cold air and warming up the valley."

Cold weather is almost a year around proposition. Big Piney had only a 61-day growing season last year, compared with 148 growing days at Cheyenne, some 300 miles to the southeast.

Frostburg Legion Opposes Closing Of College There

Support Of Other Area Posts Sought

FROSTBURG, Feb. 4 — Officers of Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion, received instructions from the membership at the regular meeting Monday night to contact ever Legion Post and Legion Auxiliary in Allegany and Garrett counties and urge them to protest against any movement to abandon Frostburg State Teachers' College, which was established here in 1902.

Citizens of Frostburg, a Legion official pointed out, have been compelled from the time the school was opened here until the present time, to put up a fight to secure sufficient funds to maintain the institution and to provide for the construction of buildings now on the campus.

The present buildings include administration building, opened in 1902; present science hall, completed in 1912; residence hall, completed in 1914; addition to residence hall, completed in 1924; the buildings containing the auditorium and gymnasium and heating plant, completed in 1928, and the newest building, the college elementary school, completed in 1934.

In addition to this group of buildings, the college has a combined campus and athletic field with an area of 7½ acres. The portion of the campus used as an athletic field was acquired as WPA project. The land was formerly the site of a large number of homes of local Negro residents who were moved out of the area during 1935 and 1936, after the state acquired title to the property, to make room for the present athletic field which is adequate for football and soccer and satisfactory for college baseball.

One of the spectacular fights in the interest of the college was made by William A. Gunter, during his term of office as state senator, when he had the entire General Assembly of Maryland adjourn for a day and come to Frostburg in 1929 to make an inspection of the college and reach a decision on the proposed closing of Oak street, which at that time divided the college buildings from the present athletic field. The members of the General Assembly voted to close the street.

Members of the American Legion and other local groups have written to the Secretary of State for copies of the report of the Maryland Commission on Higher Education, submitted to Governor Lane last week and containing comments concerning the college. The object in securing the report is to learn the facts before making future plans in behalf of the college.

During the past week a representative of a prominent manufacturer of band uniforms was in Meyersdale taking measurements of members of the Meyersdale Community Band, sponsored by Friendship Lodge 67 of the Loyal Order of Moose. Following a discussion of various styles the group voted to purchase a high-waisted short jacket style uniform, to be made in gold gabardine, with black decorations across the chest. The high-waisted trousers will be of black with gold stripes down the seams. A shake type hat with a pompon was also chosen to match the suit.

Mrs. Leo Durst was named as drum majorette of the band, for whom a specially designed uniform will be made. Approximately 25 members of the organization were measured following a recent rehearsal. Others returning from college for the summer will be measured at a local store, as will new members joining the band.

Officers of the Moose Club, with members of the band, are discussing ways and means so that the local musical organization, under the directorship of Director Nat LaCavera, may have a full program during the summer and autumn months.

LITTLE BIG PINEY KNOCKS 'EM COLD

AP Newsfeatures

BIG PINEY, Wyo. — This cold, little Wyoming mountain town makes the newspapers more often probably than any other small town in the country.

It isn't at all uncommon for stories about weather conditions throughout the nation to include the statement that "the coldest spot in the country was Big Piney, Wyo., with 20 degrees below zero."

Now the Weather Bureau has come up with an explanation of why the 241 residents of this cattle-raising community enjoy the distinction of being the "nation's icebox."

The Weather Bureau blames it on a "cold air drainage" off the mountains lying to the west of the town which is situated in a mountain valley of 6,820 feet altitude.

"Masses of cold air drain off the mountain range into the valley just like streams of water," the Weather Bureau explained.

"There is also an elevation to the east. This enclosure prevents the wind from sweeping out cold air and warming up the valley."

Cold weather is almost a year around proposition. Big Piney had only a 61-day growing season last year, compared with 148 growing days at Cheyenne, some 300 miles to the southeast.

Officials Keep Well In Storage

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—It's quite a prosaic-looking storage vault in the Utah department of public instruction but over its door is this sign:

"Keep out—unless you want adventure! Mystery! Intrigue!"

Barbara Raile, department secretary, said one of the board officials was locked inside the vault late one afternoon and was rescued only because a late worker heard his tappings. The victim had the "keep out" sign installed.

Uniform Curfew Laws Are Sought For Tri-Towns

By GEORGE DADDYSMAN

WESTERNPORT, Feb. 4—The Mayor and City council of Westernport will arrange a joint meeting with city officials of Piedmont and Luke to discuss plans for uniform curfew laws in the Tri-Town communities.

Plans for the conference were made at a meeting of the council Monday night when members pointed out that curfew enforcement would be effective only if all three towns observed the law.

Police Chief Burza Hanlin stated that something should be done since lack of enforcement is creating a problem.

Rollin Seaber and William Seaber were spokesmen for a delegation protesting to the speeding of motorists and ignoring of stop signs on Walnut street. They also complained of coal trucks hauling from strip mines spilling coal on the street and suggested that they be rerouted on other streets or roads.

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 4—Charlie Feldman went down to Palm Springs over the weekend and made a deal with Darryl Zanuck to borrow Jeanne Crain for "The Glass Menagerie", Tennessee Williams' famous play. Far be it from me to hint that Charlie won her in a croquet game—but funnier things have happened on that famous Zanuck court. This will be made, natch, after the birth of Jeanne's baby.

Cary Grant

Who will play the Laurette Taylor role in "Glass Menagerie" is still a moot question. I have an idea it will be Ethel Barrymore. I can't think of a better choice. That Barrymore charm comes through the screen like a million.

And by the way, there's a story in the March Esquire about Charlie Feldman. Agents are certainly getting written up these days. Want to bet that Charlie won't produce "The Glass Menagerie" for 20th?

After the way the reviewers went for his startling camera technique in directing "Lady In the Lake" you can bet that Robert Montgomery won't be satisfied in the future with the old route formulas.

He's going to Vienna in May to arrange to shoot "The Big Two" against the locale of the actual play. Bob wants to give his first movie away from M.G.M. an authentic newsreel quality.

There's one big break in his favor: It so happens that the best equipped studio in Vienna is in the American zone of occupation and space can be rented.

All Grace Moore's friends have read her last interview printed in a Copenhagen newspaper with tears. In part she said:

"I love life, and I love to meet new people. More than anything in the world I want a new opera where the chief actress doesn't die. I'm tired of that. That's one of the reasons I love 'Louise', she doesn't die. It's wonderful to be alive. I love to live and sing."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Viveca Lindfors cabled that she missed being on the tragic Grace Moore plane by a mere half hour. She was cancelled to one that took off from the same airport 30 minutes later.

That brilliant brocade dinner gown for Audrey Totter in "Unsuspected" is said to be sexy but not in a way the Johnston office can object to. That I gotta see.

Eleanor and Brian Aherne celebrated their first wedding anniversary at their Indio Ranch and he gifted her with a diamond heart matching the one he gave her for a wedding gift.

When they tore down the old Istanbul prison that has stood at Istanbul, Turkey, since the middle ages, the officials were amazed at the great number of Hollywood pin-up pictures in the cells—particularly of Ann Sheridan.

And speaking of pin-up pictures—that was a sweet thing the boys in a military convalescent ward sent to Susan Peters heralding her as their favorite "chin-up girl".

"But lady, how'd I know you lost a purse—I ain't seen your Times-News Want Ad yet"

Alice Faye and Phil Harris want to take a South American vacation soon. Probably to find out what Phil "loves about the south"—Americans.

Cary Grant took Karan Gaylord, former Goldwyn girl, out to dinner a couple of times in Mexico City. But don't take that too seriously. His heart still belongs to Betty Hensel.

Bobbe Fidler Sutton writes from Mexico that Ty Power piloted her and John over the biggest volcano crater south of the border. Bet they weren't half as hot as 20th will be when they hear what their fair haired boy is doing.

Ann Todd's 6-year-old daughter, Francesca, arrives in New York tomorrow. Ann considers the name Francesca good luck. The play which brought her fame on the stage was "Francesca" and she was Francesca in "The Seventh Veil", the movie that put her in the star brackets.

Faye Emerson and Elliott Roosevelt are collaborating on a new book which will probably give Westbrook Pegler material for a whole new column when it comes out.

Joint Decision Finds 'Juke Joint' Is Not

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—The state's case against an alleged parole violator fell apart when a diligent search failed to turn up an authoritative definition of a "juke joint."

A woman on parole from a 10-year prison sentence for robbery was picked up on the complaint she had violated a specification that she stay away from such establishments. The judge asked for a legal definition of the term and, when the prosecutor confessed that a thorough search through dictionaries and state laws was fruitless, he ordered the woman released.

LADY GET OFF THAT LINE!

I am about to write five immortal words.

Grateful governments should reward me with big, fat medals for daring to say them.

Salaried executives should endow me with heavy pensions—beginning now.

Frantic husbands, furious tradesmen and long suffering laborers in every walk of life should wire my boss immediately and suggest large raises in pay.

And enthusiastic city fathers everywhere should erect tin statues of me in every village square.

But will any of these pleasant things happen to little Elsie? They will not. Instead, it's a ten to one shot that I will promptly get my teeth kicked on by 9,557,845 indignant females with possible chances of arrest for mayhem, arson and general defamation of the dear little home in the west.

Yet in spite of that, it will be a glorious death. For I would at last have uttered those words which billions of tortured citizens have longed to say ever since Mr. Bell linked up the sound waves with the female larynx.

Meaning what? Just this—

LADY GET OFF THAT LINE!

There are many types of criminals listed on the police blotters but I doubt if any mortal causes more widespread rage and misery than the dear little woman who has nothing in the world to do but telephone her lady friend and starts doing it the minute she gets the kids off to school in the morning, continuing thereafter for at least 10 hours with increasing ruination to countless guys who are in urgent need of a spot on the air but who are just out of luck while the girls are doing their daily broadcast.

Healthy, rosy cheeked young men grow long gray beards and develop sciatica while waiting for Mame to get through telling Rosie about that adorable new green hat she bought in the January sale. Stout gentlemen with high blood pressure and vast political programs blow their lids and are carted off to assorted sanitaria while listening to Suzie chew the fat about her new hairdo.

And if you think this is funny, so's the gas chamber. The grim truth is that countless characters are blocked and frustrated in their daily stint just because some frail little female has grabbed a telephone receiver and can't let go. Homes have been broken up, irate males have developed pernicious schizophrenia and leading citizens die daily by the dozen in telephone booths simply because the rest of us haven't the spunk to rise in our rage and yell—

LADY, GET OFF THAT LINE!

With the alternative of serving six months in a chain gang if she doesn't. And I don't mean maybe.

Hectic Battle Decided In Last Four Minutes

A sensational fourth period rally enabled Allegany High School's ballhawks to smash the 14-game winning streak of Keyser High School's hitherto undefeated basketball team last night in a hammer and tongs duel at Campobello before a gathering of approximately 1,000 persons. The final score was 34 to 25.

For 28 of the 32 minutes there was little to choose between the teams and as the warriors ceased hostilities momentarily for the automatic time-out Allegany held a scant two-point advantage at 23-21. Then came the explosion and Allegany wrecked the Keyser outfit all within the space of four minutes—the last four minutes of the hectic battle.

James "Sonny" Lease, who wreaked havoc in the recent AHS-Fort Hill tilt, flipped in an overhead shot from the 18-foot mark and Tommy Powers heaved one through the cords with an on-the-run shot to give the Campers a six-point advantage at 27-21. William "Pickle" Jones interrupted the AHS slurge to hoop two shots at the charity stripe. Then Lease banged in a lay-up and Ned Clopton sank charity toss to make it 30-23.

Shaw Forced To Retire

Allegany lost the services of Gene Shaw, hardworking guard, at this stage of the game when he went down in a heap during a scrimmage near the end railing. The officials ruled that a deliberate foul by Kenny See caused Shaw to take a dive and suffer a head injury, forcing him to leave the game. Clingan, who replaced the "Flying Redhead," was given two foul shots and he converted both to give AHS a seven-point lead at 32-23.

First Half Ends 12-12

Allegany spotted Keyser four points as the game got under way when Fred Blamer banked a high shot from the sideline and See connected with a lay-up. Shaw broke the ice for AHS with a foul goal after See fell on him and Blamer converted one of two free throws to make it 5-1. Keyser. Allegany, however, found the range in a hurry and knotted the count at 5-5 at the quarter whistle on Hilleary's set shot from the sideline and a 20-foot heave by Shaw.

Allegany moved ahead by four points as the second period got under way when Shaw moved in close to bank a goal and Clopton hit the target from the side. Keyser trailed at 9-7 on See's overhead shot, Hilleary scored a foul for the Campers, Cline made a lay-up shot good, Lease heaved in one from the 18-foot mark, See scored from the 15-foot line and Jones' long shot knotted the count at 12-12 at the halfway mark.

Baskets by Lease and Jones kept it tied at 14-14 as the third quarter got under way. Clopton's goal and Lease's foul gave AHS a 17-14 edge only to have Blamer's charity point and Jones' double-decker tie up the score for the fourth and final time in the game at 17-17. "Cotty" Cline's foul sent Keyser ahead but Shaw's lay-up gave the Campobello quint the long end of a 19-18 score as the third period ended. Allegany never relinquished the lead again.

Shaw's corner shot and Lease's goal on the run brought the spectators to their feet as Allegany's lead mounted to 23-18. Quinn's fielder and foul reduced the AHS edge to three points at 23-21 with four minutes left to play. Then Allegany put the game on ice.

Gene Shaw played a whale of a ball game for the Campers before "taking the count" in the fourth heat. He had committed his fourth personal foul with the score of 18-17 in favor of Keyser and ten minutes left to play yet he failed to let this interfere with his good defensive work.

AHS Halts Forwards

Keyser's high scoring forwards—See and Blamer—were limited to a total of three baskets.

Lease was Allegany's big offensive threat with eleven points, including five fielders, three of which came in the "clutch" in the final period. Shaw gathered ten points in addition to playing a sweet floor game while Hilleary stood out on defense. Cline and Quinn played outstanding floor games for Keyser while Jones headed the visiting scorers with eight points.

By winning Allegany atoned for a 38-36 loss suffered in Keyser on January 3. Last year it was just the opposite. Keyser won the opener here and AHS took the return game. Lineups:

LaSalle Cagers Score Over Ridgeley, 35-23

Explorers Attain .500 Mark With 4th In Row

By JOHN L. BORCHERT

Coach Johnny Long's LaSalle Explorers rallied in the second half to topple the Ridgeley Blackhawks 35-23 last night in the SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium. It was the fourth consecutive win for the "red hot" Explorers and moved them back into the "500" column with nine wins in eighteen starts this season.

A stunned crowd of 500-fans looked on as LaSalle rallied with 3:20 to go in the third period to overcome a three-point lead by Ridgeley and take the lead by five points on four consecutive baskets. The Hawks, led by Alfred Abe, fought back but LaSalle steadily increased its margin to come out on top by twelve points as the final whistle blew.

Jimmy Flanagan opened the scoring after two minutes of play with a fielder from the side and Alfred Abe followed with two charity tosses to send Ridgeley ahead 4-0. Karl Muller's basket at 2:50 and Jack "Moons" Stotler's goal thirty seconds later tied the score at 4-all. Roy Comer's foul toss and Stotler's gift throw kept the score knotted 5-5 at the quarter.

Hawks Lead 9-6 At Half

Bill Brehany's foul toss in the opening seconds of the second quarter and Joe Moss's basket three minutes later put Ridgeley ahead at 8-5 nd Flanagan increased the margin to four points (9-5) with a conversion from the foul line. With 45-seconds remining LaSalle broke the ice as Muller made one of two free throws to leave Ridgeley with a 9-6 halftime lead.

Ridgeley started fast in the third quarter with Moss sandwiching baskets around Stotler's free throw to push the score to 13-7, Ridgeley. LaSalle came back with Bob Vanderhout converting two fouls and Stotler scoring a basket to make it 13-12, Ridgeley. Comer and Brehany tallied baskets while Clem Snyder scored a fielder to set the stage for the Explorer rally. Ridgeley was leading 17-14 when the storm broke. The "Fighting Irish" hit from all sides as Tommy Cloonan, Vanderhout, Stotler, and Vandehout sliced the net in that order to move LaSalle into the lead at 22-17. Moss's twin-pointer with five seconds to go closed the Explorer margin to three points (22-19) as the third period closed.

Score 11 Straight Points

Ridgeley seemed to fall apart before the LaSalle onslaught as the final period got underway. The Explorers scored eleven straight points before Ridgeley broke the ice on Comer's foul toss with 4:35 to go. LaSalle led 33-20. LaSalle's flow of markers came in this manner, Vanderhout opened the period with two for two at the foul line, Snyder followed with a basket and Stotler added a basket and foul toss to run LaSalle's margin to 30. Vanderhout's basket and Stotler's free throw rounded out the LaSalle streak as Comer scored. Abe's basket and gift throw brought Ridgeley within ten points of LaSalle (33-23) with 1:05 left but Snyder cut the net with a double-decker with ten seconds left to close the scoring for the night. LaSalle waived four foul chances in the last two minutes and thirty seconds of play as the Explorers executed a masterful exhibition of "freezing" the ball. The loss was Ridgeley's fourth in thirteen starts this season.

Clem Snyder and Bob Vanderhout were demons under the basket, snagging rebounds at both ends of the court, breaking up Blackhawk plays, and scoring a total eighteen points. Jack Stotler hit the bell for 12 points for LaSalle. Alfred Abe played the best floor game of the night, stopping the Explorers cold in the first half, and setting up many of the Hawks scoring plays. Big Joe Moss paced the Birds with eight points.

Little Explorers Win

In the preliminary, the LaSalle Reserves overcame a 21-17 lead by the Ridgeley Reserves to win 29-22. Leo paced the Little Explorers with seven markers while Bob Iser and Breakall split fourteen points for Ridgeley. Lineups:

Interstate Loop To Meet Sunday

Notices were mailed to all managers and representatives of teams entered in the Interstate Baseball League to attend an important meeting to be held at the Fort Cumberland, Post No. 13, American Legion home at 3:00 p. m. Sunday, February 9, it was reported last night by Ray Lippold, secretary of that loop.

Action will be taken on the recent withdrawal of the Hyndman Firemen and Mt. Savage teams from the circuit to jump into the rival Bi-State loop. The schedule of games, number of contests to be played, beginning and end of season and other important details will be discussed at the meeting.

Allegany Snaps Keyser's 14-Game String

Hectic Battle Decided In Last Four Minutes

A sensational fourth period rally enabled Allegany High School's ballhawks to smash the 14-game winning streak of Keyser High School's hitherto undefeated basketball team last night in a hammer and tongs duel at Campobello before a gathering of approximately 1,000 persons. The final score was 34 to 25.

For 28 of the 32 minutes there was little to choose between the teams and as the warriors ceased hostilities momentarily for the automatic time-out Allegany held a scant two-point advantage at 23-21. Then came the explosion and Allegany wrecked the Keyser outfit all within the space of four minutes—the last four minutes of the hectic battle.

James "Sonny" Lease, who wreaked havoc in the recent AHS-Fort Hill tilt, flipped in an overhead shot from the 18-foot mark and Tommy Powers heaved one through the cords with an on-the-run shot to give the Campers a six-point advantage at 27-21. William "Pickle" Jones interrupted the AHS slurge to hoop two shots at the charity stripe. Then Lease banged in a lay-up and Ned Clopton sank charity toss to make it 30-23.

Shaw Forced To Retire

Allegany lost the services of Gene Shaw, hardworking guard, at this stage of the game when he went down in a heap during a scrimmage near the end railing. The officials ruled that a deliberate foul by Kenny See caused Shaw to take a dive and suffer a head injury, forcing him to leave the game. Clingan, who replaced the "Flying Redhead," was given two foul shots and he converted both to give AHS a seven-point lead at 32-23.

Allegany spotted Keyser four points as the game got under way when Fred Blamer banked a high shot from the sideline and See connected with a lay-up. Shaw broke the ice for AHS with a foul goal after See fell on him and Blamer converted one of two free throws to make it 5-1. Keyser. Allegany, however, found the range in a hurry and knotted the count at 5-5 at the quarter whistle on Hilleary's set shot from the sideline and a 20-foot heave by Shaw.

Allegany moved ahead by four points as the second period got under way when Shaw moved in close to bank a goal and Clopton hit the target from the side. Keyser trailed at 9-7 on See's overhead shot. Hilleary scored a foul for the Campers, Cline made a lay-up shot good, Lease heaved in one from the 18-foot mark. See scored from the 15-foot line and Jones' long shot knotted the count at 12-12 at the halfway mark.

Baskets by Lease and Jones kept it tied at 14-14 as the third quarter got under way. Clopton's goal and Lease's foul gave AHS a 17-14 edge only to have Blamer's charity point and Jones' double-decker tie up the score for the fourth and final time in the game at 17-17. "Cotty" Cline's foul sent Keyser ahead but Shaw's lay-up gave the Campobello quint the long end of a 19-18 score as the third period ended. Allegany never relinquished the lead again.

Shaw's corner shot and Lease's goal on the run brought the spectators to their feet as Allegany's lead mounted to 23-18. Quinn's fielder and foul reduced the AHS edge to three points at 23-21 with four minutes left to play. Then Allegany put the game on ice.

AHS Halts Forwards

Keyser's high scoring forwards—See and Blamer—were limited to a total of three baskets.

Lease was Allegany's big offensive threat with eleven points, including five fielders, three of which came in the "clutch" in the final period. Shaw gathered ten points in addition to playing a sweet floor game while Hilleary stood out on defense. Cline and Quinn played outstanding floor games for Keyser while Jones headed the visiting scorers with eight points.

By winning Allegany atoned for a 38-36 loss suffered in Keyser on January 3. Last year it was just the opposite. Keyser won the opener here and AHS took the return game. Lineups:

LaSalle Cagers Score Over Ridgeley, 35-23

Explorers Attain .500 Mark With 4th In Row

By JOHN L. BORCHERT

Coach Johnny Long's LaSalle Explorers rallied in the second half to topple the Ridgeley Blackhawks 35-23 last night in the SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium. It was the fourth consecutive win for the "red hot" Explorers and moved them back into the "500" column with nine wins in eighteen starts this season.

A stunned crowd of 500-fans looked on as LaSalle rallied with 3:20 to go in the third period to overcome a three-point lead by Ridgeley and take the lead by five points on four consecutive baskets. The Hawks, led by Alfred Abe, fought back but LaSalle steadily increased its margin to come out on top by twelve points as the final whistle blew.

Jimmy Flanagan opened the scoring after two minutes of play with a fielder from the side and Alfred Abe followed with two charity tosses to send Ridgeley ahead 4-0. Karl Muller's basket at 2:50 and Jack "Moons" Stotler's goal thirty seconds later tied the score at 4-all. Roy Comer's foul toss and Stotler's gift throw kept the score knotted 5-5 at the quarter.

Hawks Lead 9-6 At Half

Bill Brehany's foul toss in the opening seconds of the second quarter and Joe Moss's basket three minutes later put Ridgeley ahead at 8-5 nd Flanagan increased the margin to four points (9-5) with a conversion from the foul line. With 45 seconds remining LaSalle broke the ice as Muller made one of two free throws to leave Ridgeley with a 9-6 halftime lead.

Ridgeley started fast in the third quarter with Moss sandwiching baskets around Stotler's free throw to push the score to 13-7, Ridgeley. LaSalle came back with Bob Vanderhout converting two fouls and Stotler scoring a basket to make it 13-12, Ridgeley. Comer and Brehany tallied baskets while Clem Snyder scored a fielder to set the stage for the Explorer rally. Ridgeley was leading 17-14 when the storm broke. The "Fighting Irish" hit from all sides as Tommy Cloonan, Vanderhout, Stotler, and Vandehout sliced the net in that order to move LaSalle into the lead at 22-17. Moss's twin-pointer with five seconds to go closed the Explorer margin to three points (22-19) as the third period closed.

Score 11 Straight Points

Ridgeley seemed to fall apart before the LaSalle onslaught as the final period got underway. The Explorers scored eleven straight points before Ridgeley broke the ice on Comer's foul toss with 4:35 to go. LaSalle led 33-20. LaSalle's flow of markers came in this manner, Vanderhout opened the period with two for two at the foul line, Snyder followed with a basket and Stotler added a basket and foul toss to run LaSalle's margin to 30. Vanderhout's basket and Stotler's free throw rounded out the LaSalle streak as Comer scored. Abe's basket and gift throw brought Ridgeley within ten points of LaSalle (33-23) with 1:05 left but Snyder cut the net with a double-decker with ten seconds left to close the scoring for the night. LaSalle waived four foul chances in the last two minutes and thirty seconds of play as the Explorers executed a masterful exhibition of "freezing" the ball. The loss was Ridgeley's fourth in thirteen starts this season.

Clem Snyder and Bob Vanderhout were demons under the basket, snagging rebounds at both ends of the court, breaking up Blackhawk plays, and scoring a total eighteen points. Jack Stotler hit the bell for 12 points for LaSalle. Alfred Abe played the best floor game of the night, stopping the Explorers cold in the first half, and setting up many of the Hawks scoring plays. Big Joe Moss paced the Birds with eight points.

Little Explorers Win

In the preliminary, the LaSalle Reserves overcame a 21-17 lead by the Ridgeley Reserves to win 29-22. Leo paced the Little Explorers with seven markers while Bob Iser and Breakall split fourteen points for Ridgeley. Lineups:

Interstate Loop To Meet Sunday

Notices were mailed to all managers and representatives of teams entered in the Interstate Baseball League to attend an important meeting to be held at the Fort Cumberland, Post No. 13, American Legion home at 3:00 p. m. Sunday, February 9, it was reported last night by Ray Lippold, secretary of that loop.

Action will be taken on the recent withdrawal of the Hyndman Firemen and Mt. Savage teams from the circuit to jump into the rival Bi-State loop. Lippold stated that both outfits had posted forfeit and expense money with the secretary and a vote will be taken to determine whether or not the money will be returned to the two teams. No official notice has been given to Interstate officers yet by the two teams of their withdrawal.

It is planned to continue the circuit with eight teams if possible, Lippold said, with six outfits—Moorefield Legion, Barrelville, Cumberland Moose, Cumberland Legion, Cumberland F. O. Eagles and Centerville—already voted into the league and two more berths to be filled. The schedule of games, number of contests to be played, beginning and end of season and other important details will be discussed at the meeting.

Redlegs Sign Adams, Cassini And Peterson

Peterson, righthander from Salt Lake city, has pitched only one inning in organized baseball—retiring three batters in a row for the Reds in 1944 shortly before he entered the Army. However, he turned in eight no-hitters for a service team in the Philippines, a Reds' spokesman said.

Bullets To Play On Pacific Coast

Baltimore Pros Win 33 Of 39 Cage Tilts

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets, currently setting the American Professional Basketball League on fire, announced today they will invade the Pacific Northwest in March.

The Bullets earlier cancelled plans for a February jaunt to the west coast. Their schedue for the substitute trip to the northwest hasn't been worked out yet, but they have one game lined up in connection with the Wenatchee Apple Festival at Bellingham, Wash.

The Baltimore basketeers have won 33 of their 39 games so far this season and have a 20-3 record in the American pro loop—314 percentage points ahead of their nearest rivals.

Manager Buddy Jeannette's boys are carded for exhibitions in Chicago on March 8, Cleveland on March 9 and 11, and a three-game invasion of Atlanta Feb. 22-25.

The Bullets were scheduled to play a return game here February 16 with the Amvets but the contest has been cancelled. The Baltimore team won here earlier in the season.

Birds Sign Cihocki

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4—(AP)—Al (Yogi) Cihocki, a second baseman from Nanticoke, Pa., has become the first member of the Baltimore Orioles Baseball Club, to sign a 1947 contract, Manager Tommy Thomas announced.

Bedell Takes Over

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4—(AP)—C. S. (Chet) Bedell, new executive director of League of Maryland Sportsmen, has arrived here to take up his duties. He succeeds F. Wallace Taber, recently resigned.

Bedell is a former editor of the magazine "Game Breeder and Sportsman" and an organizer of Ducks Unlimited.

It used to be done that way, before the development of power shovels, bulldozers, and trucks. It took a lot of extra time and cost a lot of money.

That's especially true in repairing automobiles. It takes the right tool to do the job quickly . . . and Spoerl's well-equipped shop can do the work on your car faster . . . with a resultant saving in labor cost.

Redlegs Sign Adams, Cassini And Peterson

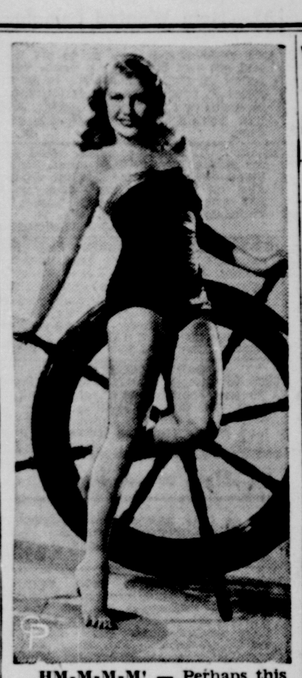
Peterson, righthander from Salt Lake city, has pitched only one inning in organized baseball—retiring three batters in a row for the Reds in 1944 shortly before he entered the Army. However, he turned in eight no-hitters for a service team in the Philippines, a Reds' spokesman said.



HM-M-M-M! — Perhaps this doesn't belong on the sports page, but it certainly belongs! The gal? Rita Hayworth. The reason? She's queen of the National Boat Show which is now being held in Chicago.

Bullets To Play On Pacific Coast

Baltimore Pros Win 33 Of 39 Cage Tilts

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4 (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets, currently setting the American Professional Basketball League on fire, announced today they will invade the Pacific Northwest in March.

The Bullets earlier cancelled plans for a February jaunt to the west coast. Their schedue for the substitute trip to the northwest hasn't been worked out yet, but they have one game lined up in connection with the Wenatchee Apple Festival at Bellingham, Wash.

The Baltimore basketeers have won 33 of their 39 games so far this season and have a 20-3 record in the American pro loop—.314 percentage points ahead of their nearest rivals.

Manager Buddy Jeannette's boys are carded for exhibitions in Chicago on March 8, Cleveland on March 9 and 11, and a three-game invasion of Atlanta Feb. 22-25.

The Bullets were scheduled to play a return game here February 16 with the Amvets but the contest has been cancelled. The Baltimore team won here earlier in the season.

Birds Sign Cihocki

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4—(AP)—Al (Yogi) Cihocki, a second baseman from Nanticoke, Pa., has become the first member of the Baltimore Orioles Baseball Club, to sign a 1947 contract, Manager Tommy Thomas announced.

BUILD A HIGHWAY with a PICK and SHOVEL?

It used to be done that way, before the development of power shovels, bulldozers, and trucks. It took a lot of extra time and cost a lot of money.

That's especially true in repairing automobiles. It takes the right tool to do the job quickly . . . and Spoerl's well-equipped shop can do the work on your car faster . . . with a resultant saving in labor cost.

Why not test us, next time?

Card of Thanks

I take this means of thanking the neighbors who assisted me following the death of my beloved husband, Lee E. Ruddle. I also wish to thank those who sent floral tributes, those donating cars and especially the West Side neighbors, the Kelly-Springfield Tire Employees, the Rev. Harrington and singers, and for the very many cards of sympathy.
MRS. LEE E. RUDDLE

We take this means of expressing sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors who were so sympathetic and helpful during the bereavement, the sudden death of our three children, William H. Beckwith, Mary Jane Beckwith, and Thomas E. Beckwith, Jr. We are grateful for the many floral tributes, the use of cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and to all who in any manner assisted us.
THE FAMILY

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear father, Robert Riser, who passed away one year ago today Feb. 5, 1946.
Just one year ago today
A day we all remember
When all the rest forget
Gone from pain and suffering
To a land of peace and rest
God has taken you Dear Father
In his Heavenly home of rest
Sadly missed by his CHILDREN

Card of Thanks

I take this means of thanking the neighbors who assisted me following the death of my beloved husband, Lee E. Ruddle. I also wish to thank those who sent floral tributes, those donating cars and especially the West Side neighbors, the Kelly-Springfield Tire Employees, the Rev. Harrington and singers, and for the very many cards of sympathy.
MRS. LEE E. RUDDLE

We take this means of expressing sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors who were so sympathetic and helpful during the bereavement, the sudden death of our three children, William H. Beckwith, Mary Jane Beckwith, and Thomas E. Beckwith, Jr. We are grateful for the many floral tributes, the use of cars for the funeral, the pallbearers, and to all who in any manner assisted us.
THE FAMILY

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear father, Robert Riser, who passed away one year ago today Feb. 5, 1946.
Just one year ago today
Our father went to rest
A day we all remember
When all the rest forget
Gone from pain and suffering
To a land of peace and rest
God has taken you Dear Father
In his Heavenly home of rest
Sadly missed by his CHILDREN

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

The All-American Commentator

Criticism of journalism on the radio is a ticklish subject, particularly in a newspaper which is engaged in the same line of work. But, since news is not only the most popular but certainly the most important commodity radio has to offer, the handling of news and news comment is a difficult topic to avoid. Certainly all sorts of opinions from extreme right to extreme left should be on the air but those who purvey them should have something to offer besides an opinion.

John Crosby

I'm speaking specifically of Upton Close, "defender of American principles and champion of straight thinking" or, as he is sometimes billed, "The All-American Comentator." Close, now heard on the Mutual Broadcasting System on Tuesdays at 10:15 p. m., was twice dropped by the National Broadcasting Company. After a decidedly curious interpretation of Pearl Harbor made in a broadcast on December 7, 1941, he was suspended on the ground that his comments were irresponsible. His later broadcasts convinced NBC that his knowledge of the Far Eastern situation was questionable and they refused to renew his contract in 1944.

Close's political convictions are about one hundred yards to the right of even the National Association of Manufacturers, which is pretty far right. After a close study of five of his scripts, and after hearing many of his broadcasts, I can report with reasonable confidence that he is anti-Communist, anti-British, anti-Russian, anti-United Nations, anti-Roosevelt, anti-Truman and even, curiously enough, anti-Republican or at least anti-Vandenberg. I use the phrase "reasonable confidence" advisedly because it is very difficult to pin Mr. Close down in any one statement.

His sentences start out bravely toward the Polish elections and may wind up with an oblique reference to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's automobile accident.

Here is a typical example of his "straight thinking": "Our Communist allies have as usual clipped us with surprise offensives. We're all wrapped up by their push on Norway to fortify Spitzbergen and the election in Poland which, if we leave it alone, makes us look either like mice or admitting that eastern Europe was outside our province to begin with. Either alternative would leave the Roosevelt war effort still further without meaning and internationalism a yet more discredited illusion." For a sheer jumble of disconnected incidents, the only comparable statement I ever heard emanated from a terribly confused woman at Schraffts, who was attempting to explain the Supreme Court's gold decision.

Close, however, is not confused; he is just cautious. Sensible persons, he says, "Can see no possible further use for all those in the Latin-American and Far Eastern Divisions (of the State Department) who can't forget both the hates of the last war which are no longer useful and the false loves of the last war which make us ridiculous"? What are the "false loves of the last war which make us ridiculous"? Britain and Russia, apparently, but it's hard to tell. What are the false hates—Peron and Franco, or the Nazis and Fascists?

"Under a Republican Congress and with no great persuasive voice to sell them on world government, the American people are going to have sober second thoughts about the United Nations, particularly about setting up world government authority over our economy including tariffs and prices and how much stuff we can make and grow." You will note that Close doesn't say the "world government," which the United Nations certainly isn't, has any intention of controlling American tariffs, prices and "the stuff we can make and grow." He just says we'll have sober second thoughts about it.

Who had the first thoughts, Mr. Close? No one has ever hinted at the extension of United Nations authority to include control of prices, which even the administration has abandoned; production, which has never been attempted in this country except in wartime; and farm products. Such irresponsibility isn't funny and goes dangerously beyond the ordinary concepts of free speech.

Close is adept at this sort of shadowy mud-slinging. A masterpiece of Close's "straight thinking" is this paragraph in which the commentator was discussing General George C. Marshall's fitness to be Secretary of State: "Those who doubt General Marshall base their feelings largely upon his equivocal testimony before the Pearl Harbor Investigating Committee but at that time Marshall was still a soldier, who never brings dishonor upon a superior officer." The implication is that Marshall didn't tell all he knew about President Roosevelt's pre-war diplomacy but Close can't quite bring himself to make bold statements.

While the air should be free to all opinion, the broadcasters certainly ought to set up some sort of journalistic standards. Close's talks are unfair, wildly implausible and at their worst are plain gobbledygook. They don't meet any editorial standards at all. No matter what his convictions, any good editor would ask Close to clarify these curious sentences, to substantiate these vague implications and to explain why his incredible conclusions differ so widely from those of his fellow reporters.

Mr. Close is sponsored by an organization called the National Economic Council which has dedicated itself, it says, to "upholding the American way of life."

Kay Kyser Show Format Changed While In East

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — Kay Kyser, now broadcasting from the east coast instead of the west, has changed the format of his Wednesday nighter on NBC at 10:30 somewhat. Instead of quizzing victims from the audience, he will use guests and have them turn their quiries his way. Also he is now calling his show "College of Music and Knowledge."

The Wednesday night guest is Lauritz Melchior, who lately has been dropping around to quite a few programs.

Frank Sinatra is to be on vacation for the next three weeks, so his CBS 9 o'clock will be handled by program visitors. First comes Jack Carson, who will do this show in addition to his own on CBS at 8.

Hildegarde off the CBS Sunday night will be a Wednesday night visitor on NBC, where she once broadcast. The particular show she is calling upon is Duffy's Tavern a la Gardner at 9.

The March of Science division of the CBS School of the Air at 5 is to tell "The Story of Radar" once more. . . . Information Please is to be a special line into Hollywood on CBS at 10:30 so that Gregory Ratoff can be included as a guest without his coming to New York.

Bing Crosby already has recorded Beatrice Lillie in a guest capacity for his 10 o'clock show on ABC.

That new MBS dramatized series, "Did Justice Triumph?" will have its second MBS offering at 10. This is the script which is adapted from a currently running newspaper series.

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

The All-American Commentator

Criticism of journalism on the radio is a ticklish subject, particularly in a newspaper which is engaged in the same line of work. But, since news is not only the most popular but certainly the most important commodity radio has to offer, the handling of news and news comment is a difficult topic to avoid. Certainly all sorts of opinions from extreme right to extreme left should be on the air but those who purvey them should have something to offer besides an opinion.

John Crosby

I'm speaking specifically of Upton Close, "defender of American principles and champion of straight thinking" or, as he is sometimes billed, "The All-American Comentator." Close, now heard on the Mutual Broadcasting System on Tuesdays at 10:15 p. m., was twice dropped by the National Broadcasting Company. After a decidedly curious interpretation of Pearl Harbor made in a broadcast on December 7, 1941, he was suspended on the ground that his comments were irresponsible. His later broadcasts convinced NBC that his knowledge of the Far Eastern situation was questionable and they refused to renew his contract in 1944.

Close's political convictions are about one hundred yards to the right of even the National Association of Manufacturers, which is pretty far right. After a close study of five of his scripts, and after hearing many of his broadcasts, I can report with reasonable confidence that he is anti-Communist, anti-British, anti-Russian, anti-United Nations, anti-Roosevelt, anti-Truman and even, curiously enough, anti-Republican or at least anti-Vandenberg. I use the phrase "reasonable confidence" advisedly because it is very difficult to pin Mr. Close down in any one statement.

His sentences start out bravely toward the Polish elections and may wind up with an oblique reference to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's automobile accident.

Here is a typical example of his "straight thinking": "Our Communist allies have as usual clipped us with surprise offensives. We're all wrapped up by their push on Norway to fortify Spitzbergen and the election in Poland which, if we leave it alone, makes us look either like mice or admitting that eastern Europe was outside our province to begin with. Either alternative would leave the Roosevelt war effort still further without meaning and internationalism a yet more discredited illusion." For a sheer jumble of disconnected incidents, the only comparable statement I ever heard emanated from a terribly confused woman at Schraffts, who was attempting to explain the Supreme Court's gold decision.

Close, however, is not confused; he is just cautious. Sensible persons, he says, "Can see no possible further use for all those in the Latin-American and Far Eastern Divisions (of the State Department) who can't forget both the hates of the last war which are no longer useful and the false loves of the last war which make us ridiculous"? What are the "false loves of the last war which make us ridiculous"? Britain and Russia, apparently, but it's hard to tell. What are the false hates—Peron and Franco, or the Nazis and Fascists?

"Under a Republican Congress and with no great persuasive voice to sell them on world government, the American people are going to have sober second thoughts about the United Nations, particularly about setting up world government authority over our economy including tariffs and prices and how much stuff we can make and grow." You will note that Close doesn't say the "world government," which the United Nations certainly isn't, has any intention of controlling American tariffs, prices and "the stuff we can make and grow." He just says we'll have sober second thoughts about it.

Who had the first thoughts, Mr. Close? No one has ever hinted at the extension of United Nations authority to include control of prices, which even the administration has abandoned; production, which has never been attempted in this country except in wartime; and farm products. Such irresponsibility isn't funny and goes dangerously beyond the ordinary concepts of free speech.

Close is adept at this sort of shadowy mud-slinging. A masterpiece of Close's "straight thinking" is this paragraph in which the commentator was discussing General George C. Marshall's fitness to be Secretary of State: "Those who doubt General Marshall base their feelings largely upon his equivocal testimony before the Pearl Harbor Investigating Committee but at that time Marshall was still a soldier, who never brings dishonor upon a superior officer." The implication is that Marshall didn't tell all he knew about President Roosevelt's pre-war diplomacy but Close can't quite bring himself to make bold statements.

While the air should be free to all opinion, the broadcasters certainly ought to set up some sort of journalistic standards. Close's talks are unfair, wildly implausible and at their worst are plain gobbledygook. They don't meet any editorial standards at all. No matter what his convictions, any good editor would ask Close to clarify these curious sentences, to substantiate these vague implications and to explain why his incredible conclusions differ so widely from those of his fellow reporters.

Mr. Close is sponsored by an organization called the National Economic Council which has dedicated itself, it says, to "upholding the American way of life."

Kay Kyser Show Format Changed While In East

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP) — Kay Kyser, now broadcasting from the east coast instead of the west, has changed the format of his Wednesday nighter on NBC at 10:30 somewhat. Instead of quizzing victims from the audience, he will use guests and have them turn their quiries his way. Also he is now calling his show "College of Music and Knowledge."

The Wednesday night guest is Lauritz Melchior, who lately has been dropping around to quite a few programs.

Frank Sinatra is to be on vacation for the next three weeks, so his CBS 9 o'clock will be handled by program visitors. First comes Jack Carson, who will do this show in addition to his own on CBS at 8.

Hildegarde off the CBS Sunday night will be a Wednesday night visitor on NBC, where she once broadcast. The particular show she is calling upon is Duffy's Tavern a la Gardner at 9.

The March of Science division of the CBS School of the Air at 5 is to tell "The Story of Radar" once more. . . . Information Please is to be a special line into Hollywood on CBS at 10:30 so that Gregory Ratoff can be included as a guest without his coming to New York.

Bing Crosby already has recorded Beatrice Lillie in a guest capacity for his 10 o'clock show on ABC.

That new MBS dramatized series, "Did Justice Triumph?" will have its second MBS offering at 10. This is the script which is adapted from a currently running newspaper series.

Juvenile Court Is Faced With Problem Of Finding Homes For Children

Delinquent Parents Given Prison Terms

Juvenile Court was called upon yesterday to sentence two sets of Allegany county parents to six months each, for contributing to the delinquency of their minor children. In each case, families were broken up and scattered, because there are no facilities provided by this county for care of children who are neglected by their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Collins, 201 Thomas Street, this city, arrested by city police January 25, were sentenced for six months each for failure to look after their three small children, and failure to provide better than a "bug infested room" for them as a home. Collins was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction and Mrs. Collins was sentenced to six months in the Maryland Reformatory for Females. The three children were placed with relatives.

A new case, which developed yesterday, had county officials and numerous local agencies in an uproar most of the day. It resulted in the sentencing of William Fazenbaker, Franklin, Md., coal miner, to six months in the House of Correction, and his wife, Mrs. Martha Fazenbaker to six months in the Maryland Reformatory.

The Fazenbakers were not strangers in Juvenile Court. They had been before the Court on previous occasions, charged with delinquency concerning six of their children. Their oldest child, Billy Fazenbaker, 17, is already in the Maryland Training School, because he persisted in running away from home sometime ago.

Chief of Police Burza Hanlin of Westernport, arrested Fazenbaker Saturday night on a charge of drunkeness and jailed him. Reports from neighbors indicated the Fazenbakers were neglecting and abusing their six children. State Trooper A. M. Spioch and Chief Hanlin went to the home to investigate.

Home Like Hog Pen

Chief Hanlin said conditions "were terrible, the place was like a hog pen." Mrs. Fazenbaker was taken into custody and the entire family, mother, father, and six children were brought to the Court House here for action by Juvenile Court.

After hearing the case, Juvenile Court Judge John Barnard, passed sentence on Mr. and Mrs. Fazenbaker, and sent them to the County Jail. Judge Barnard also committed the two oldest children Frank Fazenbaker, 14, and Francis Leo Fazenbaker, 12, to the Maryland Training School for Boys.

The Judge passed sentence on the two older boys reluctantly, explaining to them that they are not guilty of any crime, but the county itself is at fault because there is no place else to place them.

In the meantime, the other four children, Jeanette, 9, Mary Catherine, 5, Bernard, 3, and Buelah Marie, 2, were left running about the corridors of the Court House, while authorities tried to find a place for them to stay.

Taken To Jail For Lunch

Mrs. Ada Hamburg, cook at the jail, and Mrs. "Boots" Orr, wife of Deputy Sheriff William Orr, spent the rest of the day entertaining the four children.

First there was lunch. And what a lunch. Good home-cooked food topped off with liberal dishes of ice cream. And the children ate ravanously. A big tough looking trustee, who was working about the place, declared, "those kids are hungry. Their old man should be horsewhipped." And he expressed the sentiments of many others who saw the children.

After lunch, Mrs. Hamburg and Mrs. Orr bathed them and attempted to wash and clean their clothes. The children's feet, legs and arms were as black as if they had been working in a coal mine, they said.

Jeanetta was asked if they had enough to eat at home. She said, "I had one meal yesterday and a good breakfast this morning. I stayed with a neighbor woman. But the others didn't have very much."

She was quite talkative and proudly exhibited her report card. It revealed she is a student in the second grade at Hammond Street School, Westernport, has a perfect attendance record with grades above average.

Thrown Down Stairs

Jeanetta refused to answer when asked if her father beat her, but Mary Katherine volunteered the information, "Yes, he beat us, and

Jury Here Awards Barnhart $5,000 In Damage Case

Suit Removed From Washington County

An Allegany County Circuit Court jury returned a verdict last night in favor of the plaintiff, William P. Barnhart, Warfordsburg, Pa., and awarded him $5,000 damages in his suit against Leon W. French and Mrs. Edna May Pike, which was removed here from Washington county for trial.

The damage suit, seeking $15,000, was instituted by Barnhart, an employe of the Fairchild plant in Hagerstown, as the result of an automobile collision on the night of January 9, 1946, at Huyett's Crossroad on the Baltimore Turnpike, west of Hagerstown.

Barnhardt testified that lights on his car went out and that he pulled off the road to the right, to install a new fuse under the dash. He said a car operated by French and owned by Mrs. Pike, traveling in the same direction, crashed against the rear of his machine.

The plantiff told the jury he was unconscious for six days, as a result of the accident, and he "was hurt all over." He declared another car came along before the crash, and kept on going, indicating the road was clear and there was plenty of room.

Barnhart's father-in-law, Rolla Mellott, who was in the car when it was hit, filed a damage suit in Hagerstown against Barnhart, French, and Mrs. Pike, for injuries suffered in the mishap. Attorneys in the case, settled the suit out of court.

The case yesterday consumed the better part of the day in court as a large number of witnesses were heard, and there were seven lawyers involved. The case went to the jury at 5:45 p. m. and a verdict for $5,000 for Barnhart was returned about an hour and a half later.

Witnesses summoned in the case included, Dr. Ernest Poole, Bruce Spickler, Kern J. McPeak, Aubrey W. Hoover, Ira Douglas, Lucille Bowman, Leo Murray, Dr. Frank Hoffman, Rolla E. Mellott, James R. French and Leon French.

Three attorneys represented Barnhart, including William A. Gunter this city; Stuart Bushong and Irvine Rutlege. Four lawyers appeared for the defendants. They included, Walter C. Capper, this city; John J. Allen, Robert McCauley and Edward W. Cooey, Hagerstown. Chief Judge William A. Huster presided.

Sanitary District Bill Discussed By New Committee

Sub-committee Will Consider Changes

At the first meeting of the recently appointed county committee to study the proposed formation of a sanitary district in Allegany county, held at Frostburg City Hall last night, a sub-committee was named to iron out difficulties in the proposed enabling act before submitting it to county commissioners for their approval.

J. Milton Dick, committee chairman, said that the sub-committee will hold a conference next Monday at 8 p. m. at the LaVale Fire Hall to work on the proposed legislation which would authorize the county commissioners to set up sanitary districts in incorporated or unincorporated communities outside of Cumberland where there is need for improvement in water supplies and sewage disposal.

Those named are Dr. W. E. Moseley, Mt. Savage; John Cook, Potomac Park; Harrison C. Givens, Frostburg, a member of the Upper Potomac River Board; H. C. Heineman, Cresaptown; Mayor Verl A. Ash of Midland; Harry Simpson, LaVale; Mayor Marshall C. Skidmore of Frostburg; John Byrnes, Eckhart; and James Highbaugh and Alex Gardner, representing Lonaconing veterans' organizations.

Dick said he plans to invite Mayor Fred Wiseman, Luke; Mayor Arthur P. Hoffa, Barton; Mayor J. Milton McIntyre of Westernport and Mayor John Evans, Lonaconing, to serve on the sub-committee. Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer, will be asked to serve as an ex-officio member.

Representatives from LaVale, Frostburg, Midland, Potomac Park, Cresaptown and Mt. Savage at last night's meeting discussed the method of administering sanitary districts, ways of financing sanitary improvements, and the probable cost.

The proposed enabling bill would create a three-man commission to carry on the affairs of the district. One of the changes suggested is that salaries for technical employes hired by the commission should be approved by the county commissioners.

Members of the sub - committee were asked to contact residents in their home communities this week regarding the bill and to get popular reaction to the provisions so that possible amendments may be considered at the meeting next Monday.

Rev. Donald Brake Optimist's Speaker

Rev. Donald Brake, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, will be guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Cumberland Optimist Club tonight at 6:15 o'clock in Central YMCA. His subject will be "Service."

They were committed to the Maryland Training School for Boys, and sent to the county jail to await removal. But the four smaller children have no home. After spending the day in the basement kitchen of the county jail, they were finally put to bed at Memorial Hospital last night. The children are, left to right, Bernard, 3, Frank, 14, Buelah Marie, 2, Jeanetta, 9, Francis Leo, 12, and Mary Katherine, 5. (Photos by Kaldor Studio)

Forum Discussion On Recreation Set For February 12

A public meeting for forum discussion of the need for a full-time recreation program in the city will be held next Wednesday, February 12, at 8 p. m. in City Hall auditorium, according to Mayor Thomas S. Post.

Mayor Post said he was asked to make arrangements for the meeting by the Cumberland branch of the American Association of University Women. Mrs. John J. Hafer, president, will preside.

The chief speaker will be Michael P. Kelley, Baltimore, executive secretary of the Eastern Community Council, Incorporated, who has spent a number of years in recreation and community welfare work.

The AAUW and the Woman's Civic Club are co-operating in making arrangements for the meeting, and the organizations plan to invite local civic organizations and all citizens interested in recreation problems to attend.

Mrs. Gilbert Miller, chairman of the social studies committee of the AAUW, will introduce the speaker. She said that Kelley will be available on the afternoon of February 12 for conferences with individual groups interested in recreation.

Mayor Post recalled yesterday that the proposed ordinance to create a five-man recreation board for the city will be submitted to the Mayor and Council at next Monday's meeting.

In the event the ordinance passes, the mayor said, he will name members from various representative groups in Cumberland, adding that one and perhaps two of the members will be women. The new ordinance is designed to administer such facilities as the city now has for recreation, and would empower the board to appoint a paid director of recreation.

Action Withheld In B. And O. Track Obstruction Case

Boy Also Reportedly Started School Fire

Disposition of the case in which a 9-year-old Westernport boy, who admitted placing an obstacle on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad track on the 17-mile grade, 25 miles west of Cumberland Saturday, was being held in abeyance last night, Garrett County authorities said.

Explaining that the case is still being investigated to determine what action would best serve to correct the wayward trends of the youth who was identified as Richard Duckworth, Hammond Street Elementary School student, State's Attorney W. W. Dawson, said he expected to take some action today.

Allegedly Started Fire

Police officials recalled that the youth was also taken into custody in May, 1945, after he allegedly started a fire in a small supply room of the Hammond Street School.

The youth, according to police officials, entered the building about 8:40 p. m. on May 4, 1945, and took a small sum of money, then dropped a match in some paper that was kept in the supply room. Firemen said the damage was confined to the one room, but estimated damage to supplies at $500.

Monday the youth admitted that he placed an obstacle, identified as a coupler adjuster for railroad use, on the B. and O. eastbound track about 25 miles west of here "to see what would happen."

He was apprehended by an FBI agent and B. and O. police following a two-day investigation. During questioning in the school, the boy told authorities that he placed the coupler on the track to see if the train would cut it in two, flatten it, or push it off the track.

Returned Home

After waiting for a brief period, he declared he caught a bus in Bloomington, where he had gone to visit a friend, and returned to his home in Westernport.

The obstacle was noticed by Fireman Dayton L. Murphy, when a westbound train on which he was working began to ascend the grade. The engineer, O. O. McIntyre, 196 East First Street, this city, stopped the engine and removed the coupler at 12:50 p. m., just 20 minutes after the boy said he placed it there.

B. and O. officials declared the coupler would have caused a serious accident if it were still there when a passenger train, scheduled to pass over the track, a short while later, began descending the grade.

William Shipes, 46, 20 Orchard Street, a Cumberland water department employe, was treated in Allegany Hospital yesterday afternoon for a laceration on the head. He told attaches he fell and struck his head against a piece of tin.

Sylvia Broadwater, 6, Route 2, was treated in the same hospital yesterday afternoon for a cut on the head. She said she fell at East Side school and struck her head against a curb.

David Robertson, 34, Route 3, carpenter, was treated in Memorial Hospital yesterday morning for a left knee injury. He told attaches he was injured when he stepped into a hole in a floor as he was at work Monday.

Veterans' Cases Show Increase, Red Cross Says

Annual Report On Home Service Given

The Red Cross work load is just as heavy now as it was during the war because of the number of veterans' cases which must be handled, Mrs. Louise Dean, home service secretary for Allegany County Chapter, American Red Cross, said in releasing her annual report yesterday.

Total number of veterans' cases handled in 1946 was 1,069, well over double the 441 cases handled in 1945. Mrs. Dean pointed out that the Red Cross is not only bound by Congressional charter to provide home service for military personnel, but must also assist returning veterans until their pensions are settled.

Although the total number of persons assisted dropped from 6,291 in 1945 to 3,631 last year, total expenditures increased from $6,600 to $8,767 in the same period.

Mrs. Dean explained that expenditures increased because veterans must be helped pending receipt of pensions, and because in many cases young veterans who are receiving on-the-job training do not receive their subsistence checks promptly and must be helped financially.

The most significant increase in expenditures was that for ex-service personnel, which jumped from $951.47 in 1945 to $3,268.78 last year.

Assistance was given in cases such as pressing medical bills of men in service; funds for servicemen stranded en route to camp; and immediate need for money when allotments, subsistence allowances or pension payments failed to come through on time.

Figures Cited

More financial assistance was given to a greater number of Army cases in 1946 than in 1945, Mrs. Dean said. Expenditures for Army cases totaled $4,306 last year, as compared to $3,831 in 1945. Expenditures in Navy cases showed a slight decline from $1,833 in 1945 to $1,128 last year.

"Many men are re-enlisting in the service due to unemployment in this area," Mrs. Dean said. "This means that families must be cared for financially until the allowance checks are received, often over a three-months' waiting period."

Mrs. Dean emphasized that Red Cross receives no benefits or subsidies from the federal government, and that all of its audits are made by the War Department.

In addition, the local Red Cross office has assisted 1,165 veterans complete terminal leave papers since last August 26, completing the forms, checking discharge certificates and notarizing all applications. The office is called upon to check veterans who have filed for terminal leave pay and then have moved from the address listed on the applications.

Furlough Extensions Listed

Filing of 947 death and disability claims and insurance readjustments accounted for 26.1 per cent of the cases handled in 1946. Mrs. Dean explained that many men, upon being discharged, give the Red Cross power of attorney, which means that the office must present the claim, secure additional evidence and follow the case through to completion.

Cases involving financial assistance totaled 318, or 8.8 per cent of the total cases handled last year. Furlough extensions totaled 602 cases, or 16.6 per cent of the 1946 case load.

Red Cross is continuing its work overseas with the occupation troops, and field directors are on duty to handle communications between servicemen and home chapters. Mrs. Dean pointed out that there has been no letup in work as was anticipated after the war, explaining that problems are more difficult because they involve major adjustments necessary in returning to civilian life.

Sub-zero Weather Strikes Much Of Tri-State Area

Vets Renew Action To Get Hospital In Western Md.

VFW Wants Sugar Rationing Lifted

Members of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at their regular post meeting last night, took strong issue with published reports that the Military Order of Purple Heart was the first veterans' organization to take action to get a hospital for veterans in Western Maryland.

Records of the post show that two years ago, Rep. J. Glenn Beall, attending an installation of officers ceremony at the post, addressed the organization and declared he would use his influence to aid Henry Hart Post in their efforts to get a hospital here. The post at that time was on record for such an institution and had sought aid of legislators and other officials.

It was also mentioned at the meeting that three weeks ago, Old Rail Post 6025, VFW, Mt. Savage, passed a resolution seeking a hospital for veterans in Western Maryland.

Post Commander Raymond Reynolds said the post welcomes the interest of the Order of Purple Heart, but the statements that the Purple Heart is the first organization to take such action are inaccurate and "made some of the boys just a little sore."

The membership last night unanimously voted to send letters to all Maryland representatives and Senators and to other officials, in an effort to obtain a hospital for Cumberland. It is to be explained in the letter that the hospital could serve the entire Tri-State Area, that Cumberland has competent and capable physicians and surgeons, that the city is centrally located and is easily accessable by air, rail, or highway. Other VFW Posts in Western Maryland are expected to participate in the campaign, and Reynolds said the aid of all veterans organizations and others will be welcomed.

Oppose Sugar Rationing

The Post Commander was authorized to have the adjutant direct letters to Maryland senators and representatives opposing the continuance of sugar rationing. There was heated discussion on the subject, all of which favored lifting the ration program. Several veterans, including bakers, confectioners, etc., have started business here and are being forced out of business because they cannot obtain sufficient sugar to operate at a profit, it was reported at the meeting.

Several other old established concerns, some of which are operated by veterans and some of which are not are equally handicapped, post members declared, and they expressed the opinion that sugar controls should be lifted immediately.

It was reported at the meeting that Henry Hart Post is still the largest in the state, with a paid up membership of 1,582 for 1947. Six new members were admitted last night, and a number of applications are to be acted upon.

Degree Team Meeting

James Stemple called a meeting of the post degree team for Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock, saying the meeting is vitally important. He also announced that the degree team has been invited to go to Old Rail Post in Mt. Savage, February 24 to present degree work, and the invitation was accepted.

Harold Hipsley, athletic director of the post called a meeting of all members interested in softball, for February 20 at 7:30 p. m. Plans are to be outlined for the coming season and the post expects to enter

Shortwave Radio Station Approved For Naval Armory

The Federal Communications Commission has authorized the establishment of a short wave radio station for training purposes when the proposed Naval Reserve armory here is completed, according to Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, organizing officer for the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division.

Comdr. Hedrick said that Fifth Naval District headquarters, with FCC approval, has assigned the call letters N5ADD to the station, although it probably will not be put into operation for several months.

Drill practice for radio operators can be held with other Naval Reserve armories in the district. Comdr. Hedrick said, explaining that the FCC has reserved a limited number of special amateur radio call signs for such stations. Other district armories already assigned call letters are those in Baltimore; Wheeling, Huntington and Charleston, W. Va.; and Richmond, Roanoke, Lynchburg, Newport News, Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va.

The short wave station here can be used to co-operate with amateur radio organizations, individual amateurs and local civilian authorities in planning and practicing for emergency communication service in the event of a disaster such as a flood, Comdr. Hedrick said.

He announced that Lt. Comdr. Charles H. Rafferty, USNR, 165 Bedford street, has been appointed training officer in a drill pay status, and will administer the operation of the radio station in co-operation with Lt. A. J. Stauffer, USNR, general training officer of the division.

Comdr. Hedrick said that to date the division has secured 21 of its quota of 25 radiomen. He added that Comdr. Rafferty will also serve as public information officer for the division.

6 Degrees Above Reported In City

Near empty streets and a decided drop in highway traffic attested to the intense cold wave that swept over the Tri-State area yesterday afternoon and last night dropping the temperatures to 4 degrees below in some sections along with reported high winds and snow blizzards in others.

In Cumberland unofficial reports placed the mercury at 6 degrees above at midnight with cloudy weather, but in outlying districts State Police reported 3 and 4 above zero readings, and said high winds were sweeping the roads.

Grantsville in Garrett County, was reported to be the coldest section throughout the area with a 9 below zero being reported by state police, who added that a light snow was blowing about.

Road conditions west of Frostburg, where the temperatures varied from 2 to 6 degrees below, were bad and police said the roads were slick with ice, and advised motorists to use chains.

At Deal, Pa., and Thomas, W. Va., traditionally cold spots in this section, the weather report showed "4 below zero" and about three inches of newly fallen snow.

Six Below In Oakland

In Frostburg, police reported that a light snow which began early in the afternoon had stopped and said a high wind had cleared the streets of both snow and pedestrians.

Nearby Westernport, situated on the Potomac River, reported 7 above at 10:30 p. m. and the wind was whipping a light snow through the air, creating almost blizzard conditions.

Temperatures started to drop in the city shortly before noon yesterday when a 44 above reading was taken, and continued to fall throughout the evening until it reached the 6 above at midnight. A light snow fell for a short while early yesterday morning, but by noon only a few flakes were noticeable.

City and state police said traffic was "very light" on the highways and streets, and police stationed in the center of town, said "everybody that has a home is there tonight."

Slick roads east of the city were also reported, and a delay in transferring three prisoners in City Jail back to Frederick where they are wanted on larceny charges, was blamed on the weather and road conditions.

Most Roads Are Clear

State Roads Commission garages stated roads were clear east of Frostburg into Cumberland, but advised all motorists going into Garrett County to use chains. No cinder crews were called out yesterday, supervisors said.

What few cars were parked in downtown Cumberland late last night were attributed to theater goers, and working people, but police said many were experiencing difficulty in getting the motors to run when they were ready to move them.

Police and hospital attaches reported late last night that no one had been treated for frozen limbs, and hospital attendants said the admittance room experienced an unusually quiet night.

"Share-The-Work" Plans Are Sought In Kelly Contract

Local 26 Rejects Special Assessment

Local 26, United Rubber, Cork, Linoleum and Plastic Workers of America, CIO, plans to negotiate plans for sharing all available work at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant on a 40-hour basis, Earl Johnson, president, reported yesterday.

The union wants its contract amended to provide plans for both engineering and production departments, he added.

The present "share-the-work" plan placed into operation recently is on the basis of a six or seven day week and everyone is getting more than five days a week, union officials said.

The union is trying, Johnson said, to negotiate a plan whereby production would come down to 40 hours a week before furloughs would be placed into effect.

In case production should drop below the 40 hour level for a period of four weeks, the company would furlough sufficient men to bring the remaining force to a level of 40 hours or above, he added.

Members of Local 26 yesterday rejected, in a referendum vote, a proposal for a special assessment to provide for a building, strike and defense fund, he reported. Voting on the proposal was conducted yesterday by a committee headed by F. T. Grimes.

The regular meeting of the local will be held tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the union hall.

Juvenile Court Is Faced With Problem Of Finding Homes For Children

Delinquent Parents Given Prison Terms

Juvenile Court was called upon yesterday to sentence two sets of Allegany county parents to six months each, for contributing to the delinquency of their minor children. In each case, families were broken up and scattered, because there are no facilities provided by this county for care of children who are neglected by their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Collins, 201 Thomas Street, this city, arrested by city police January 25, were sentenced for six months each for failure to look after their three small children, and failure to provide better than a "bug infested room" for them as a home. Collins was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction and Mrs. Collins was sentenced to six months in the Maryland Reformatory for Females. The three children were placed with relatives.

A new case, which developed yesterday, had county officials and numerous local agencies in an uproar most of the day. It resulted in the sentencing of William Fazenbaker, Franklin, Md., coal miner, to six months in the House of Correction, and his wife, Mrs. Martha Fazenbaker to six months in the Maryland Reformatory.

The Fazenbakers were not strangers in Juvenile Court. They had been before the Court on previous occasions, charged with delinquency concerning six of their children. Their oldest child, Billy Fazenbaker, 17, is already in the Maryland Training School, because he persisted in running away from home sometime ago.

Chief of Police Burza Hanlin of Westernport, arrested Fazenbaker Saturday night on a charge of drunkeness and jailed him. Reports from neighbors indicated the Fazenbakers were neglecting and abusing their six children. State Trooper A. M. Spioch and Chief Hanlin went to the home to investigate.

Home Like Hog Pen

Chief Hanlin said conditions "were terrible, the place was like a hog pen." Mrs. Fazenbaker was taken into custody and the entire family, mother, father, and six children were brought to the Court House here for action by Juvenile Court.

After hearing the case, Juvenile Court Judge John Barnard, passed sentence on Mr. and Mrs. Fazenbaker, and sent them to the County Jail. Judge Barnard also committed the two oldest children Frank Fazenbaker, 14, and Francis Leo Fazenbaker, 12, to the Maryland Training School for Boys.

The Judge passed sentence on the two older boys reluctantly, explaining to them that they are not guilty of any crime, but the county itself is at fault because there is no place else to place them.

In the meantime, the other four children, Jeanette, 9, Mary Catherine, 5, Bernard, 3, and Buelah Marie, 2, were left running about the corridors of the Court House, while authorities tried to find a place for them to stay.

Taken To Jail For Lunch

Mrs. Ada Hamburg, cook at the jail, and Mrs. "Boots" Orr, wife of Deputy Sheriff William Orr, spent the rest of the day entertaining the four children.

First there was lunch. And what a lunch. Good home-cooked food topped off with liberal dishes of ice cream. And the children ate ravanously. A big tough looking trustee, who was working about the place, declared, "those kids are hungry. Their old man should be horsewhipped." And he expressed the sentiments of many others who saw the children.

After lunch, Mrs. Hamburg and Mrs. Orr bathed them and attempted to wash and clean their clothes. The children's feet, legs and arms were as black as if they had been working in a coal mine, they said.

Jeanetta was asked if they had enough to eat at home. She said, "I had one meal yesterday and a good breakfast this morning. I stayed with a neighbor woman. But the others didn't have very much."

She was quite talkative and proudly exhibited her report card. It revealed she is a student in the second grade at Hammond Street School, Westernport, has a perfect attendance record with grades above average.

Thrown Down Stairs

Jeanetta refused to answer when asked if her father beat her, but Mary Katherine volunteered the information, "Yes, he beat us, and

Suit Removed From Washington County

An Allegany County Circuit Court jury returned a verdict last night in favor of the plaintiff, William P. Barnhart, Warfordsburg, Pa., and awarded him $5,000 damages in his suit against Leon W. French and Mrs. Edna May Pike, which was removed here from Washington county for trial.

The damage suit, seeking $15,000, was instituted by Barnhart, an employe of the Fairchild plant in Hagerstown, as the result of an automobile collision on the night of January 9, 1946, at Huyett's Crossroad on the Baltimore Turnpike, west of Hagerstown.

Barnhardt testified that lights on his car went out and that he pulled off the road to the right, to install a new fuse under the dash. He said a car operated by French and owned by Mrs. Pike, traveling in the same direction, crashed against the rear of his machine.

The plantiff told the jury he was unconscious for six days, as a result of the accident, and he "was hurt all over." He declared another car came along before the crash, and kept on going, indicating the road was clear and there was plenty of room.

Barnhart's father-in-law, Rolla Mellott, who was in the car when it was hit, filed a damage suit in Hagerstown against Barnhart, French, and Mrs. Pike, for injuries suffered in the mishap. Attorneys in the case, settled the suit out of court.

The case yesterday consumed the better part of the day in court as a large number of witnesses were heard, and there were seven lawyers involved. The case went to the jury at 5:45 p. m. and a verdict for $5,000 for Barnhart was returned about an hour and a half later.

Witnesses summoned in the case included, Dr. Ernest Poole, Bruce Spickler, Kern J. McPeak, Aubrey W. Hoover, Ira Douglas, Lucille Bowman, Leo Murray, Dr. Frank Hoffman, Rolla E. Mellott, James R. French and Leon French.

Three attorneys represented Barnhart, including William A. Gunter this city; Stuart Bushong and Irvine Rutlege. Four lawyers appeared for the defendants. They included, Walter C. Capper, this city; John J. Allen, Robert McCauley and Edward W. Cooey, Hagerstown. Chief Judge William A. Huster presided.

Sanitary District Bill Discussed By New Committee

Sub-committee Will Consider Changes

At the first meeting of the recently appointed county committee to study the proposed formation of a sanitary district in Allegany county, held at Frostburg City Hall last night, a sub-committee was named to iron out difficulties in the proposed enabling act before submitting it to county commissioners for their approval.

J. Milton Dick, committee chairman, said that the sub-committee will hold a conference next Monday at 8 p. m. at the LaVale Fire Hall to work on the proposed legislation which would authorize the county commissioners to set up sanitary districts in incorporated or unincorporated communities outside of Cumberland where there is need for improvement in water supplies and sewage disposal.

Those named are Dr. W. E. Moseley, Mt. Savage; John Cook, Potomac Park; Harrison C. Givens, Frostburg, a member of the Upper Potomac River Board; H. C. Heineman, Cresaptown; Mayor Verl A. Ash of Midland; Harry Simpson, LaVale; Mayor Marshall C. Skidmore of Frostburg; John Byrnes, Eckhart; and James Highbaugh and Alex Gardner, representing Lonaconing veterans' organizations.

Dick said he plans to invite Mayor Fred Wiseman, Luke; Mayor Arthur P. Hoffa, Barton; Mayor J. Milton McIntyre of Westernport and Mayor John Evans, Lonaconing, to serve on the sub-committee. Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer, will be asked to serve as an ex-officio member.

Representatives from LaVale, Frostburg, Midland, Potomac Park, Cresaptown and Mt. Savage at last night's meeting discussed the method of administering sanitary districts, ways of financing sanitary improvements, and the probable cost.

The proposed enabling bill would create a three-man commission to carry on the affairs of the district. One of the changes suggested is that salaries for technical employes hired by the commission should be approved by the county commissioners.

Members of the sub - committee were asked to contact residents in their home communities this week regarding the bill and to get popular reaction to the provisions so that possible amendments may be considered at the meeting next Monday.

The parents, (shown at the left) are sentenced to six months each for neglecting their children. With no Juvenile Home here, the Court faces the problem of finding homes for the four smaller children. The problem of the two older boys was easily solved by the Court. They were committed to the Maryland Training School for Boys, and sent to the county jail to await removal. But the four smaller children have no home. After spending the day in the basement kitchen of the county jail, they were finally put to bed at Memorial Hospital last night. The children are, left to right, Bernard, 3, Frank, 14, Buelah Marie, 2, Jeanetta, 9, Francis Leo, 12, and Mary Katherine, 5. (Photos by Kaldor Studio)

Forum Discussion On Recreation Set For February 12

A public meeting for forum discussion of the need for a full-time recreation program in the city will be held next Wednesday, February 12, at 8 p. m. in City Hall auditorium, according to Mayor Thomas S. Post.

Mayor Post said he was asked to make arrangements for the meeting by the Cumberland branch of the American Association of University Women. Mrs. John J. Hafer, president, will preside.

The chief speaker will be Michael F. Kelley, Baltimore, executive secretary of the Eastern Community Council, Incorporated, who has spent a number of years in recreation and community welfare work.

The AAUW and the Woman's Civic Club are co-operating in making arrangements for the meeting, and the organizations plan to invite local civic organizations and all citizens interested in recreation problems to attend.

Mrs. Gilbert Miller, chairman of the social studies committee of the AAUW, will introduce the speaker. She said that Kelley will be available on the afternoon of February 12 for conferences with individual groups interested in recreation.

Mayor Post recalled yesterday that the proposed ordinance to create a five-man recreation board for the city will be submitted to the Mayor and Council at next Monday's meeting.

In the event the ordinance passes, the mayor said, he will name members from various representative groups in Cumberland, adding that one and perhaps two of the members will be women. The new ordinance is designed to administer such facilities as the city now has for recreation, and would empower the board to appoint a paid director of recreation.

Action Withheld In B. And O. Track Obstruction Case

Boy Also Reportedly Started School Fire

Disposition of the case in which a 9-year-old Westernport boy, who admitted placing an obstacle on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad track on the 17-mile grade, 25 miles west of Cumberland Saturday, was being held in abeyance last night, Garrett County authorities said.

Explaining that the case is still being investigated to determine what action would best serve to correct the wayward trends of the youth who was identified as Richard Duckworth, Hammond Street Elementary School student, State's Attorney W. W. Dawson, said he expected to take some action today.

Allegedly Started Fire

Police officials recalled that the youth was also taken into custody in May, 1945, after he allegedly started a fire in a small supply room of the Hammond Street School.

The youth, according to police officials, entered the building about 8:40 p. m. on May 4, 1945, and took a small sum of money, then dropped a match in some paper that was kept in the supply room. Firemen said the damage was confined to the one room, but estimated damage to supplies at $500.

Monday the youth admitted that he placed an obstacle, identified as a coupler adjuster for railroad use, on the B. and O. eastbound track about 25 miles west of here "to see what would happen."

He was apprehended by an FBI agent and B. and O. police following a two-day investigation. During questioning in the school, the boy told authorities that he placed the coupler on the track to see if the train would cut it in two, flatten it, or push it off the track.

Returned Home

After waiting for a brief period, he declared he caught a bus in Bloomington, where he had gone to visit a friend, and returned to his home in Westernport.

The obstacle was noticed by Fireman Dayton L. Murphy, when a westbound train on which he was working began to ascend the grade. The engineer, O. O. McIntyre, 196 East First Street, this city, stopped the engine and removed the coupler at 12:50 p. m., just 20 minutes after the boy said he placed it there.

B. and O. officials declared the coupler would have caused a serious accident if it were still there when a passenger train, scheduled to pass over the track, a short while later, began descending the grade.

Veterans' Cases Show Increase, Red Cross Says

Annual Report On Home Service Given

The Red Cross work load is just as heavy now as it was during the war because of the number of veterans' cases which must be handled, Mrs. Louise Dean, home service secretary for Allegany County Chapter, American Red Cross, said in releasing her annual report yesterday.

Total number of veterans' cases handled in 1946 was 1,069, well over double the 441 cases handled in 1945. Mrs. Dean pointed out that the Red Cross is not only bound by Congressional charter to provide home service for military personnel, but must also assist returning veterans until their pensions are settled.

Although the total number of persons assisted dropped from 6,291 in 1945 to 3,631 last year, total expenditures increased from $6,600 to $8,767 in the same period.

Mrs. Dean explained that expenditures increased because veterans must be helped pending receipt of pensions, and because in many cases young veterans who are receiving on-the-job training do not receive their subsistence checks promptly and must be helped financially.

The most significant increase in expenditures was that for ex-service personnel, which jumped from $951.47 in 1945 to $3,268.78 last year.

Assistance was given in cases such as pressing medical bills of men in service; funds for servicemen stranded en route to camp; and immediate need for money when allotments, subsistence allowances or pension payments failed to come through on time.

Figures Cited

More financial assistance was given to a greater number of Army cases in 1946 than in 1945, Mrs. Dean said. Expenditures for Army cases totaled $4,306 last year, as compared to $3,831 in 1945. Expenditures in Navy cases showed a slight decline from $1,833 in 1945 to $1,128 last year.

"Many men are re-enlisting in the service due to unemployment in this area," Mrs. Dean said. "This means that families must be cared for financially until the allowance checks are received, often over a three-months' waiting period."

Mrs. Dean emphasized that Red Cross receives no benefits or subsidies from the federal government, and that all of its audits are made by the War Department.

In addition, the local Red Cross office has assisted 1,165 veterans complete terminal leave papers since last August 26, completing the forms, checking discharge certificates and notarizing all applications. The office is called upon to check veterans who have filed for terminal leave pay and then have moved from the address listed on the applications.

Furlough Extensions Listed

Filing of 947 death and disability claims and insurance readjustments accounted for 26.1 per cent of the cases handled in 1946. Mrs. Dean explained that many men, upon being discharged, give the Red Cross power of attorney, which means that the office must present the claim, secure additional evidence and follow the case through to completion.

Cases involving financial assistance totaled 318, or 8.8 per cent of the total cases handled last year. Furlough extensions totaled 602 cases, or 16.6 per cent of the 1946 case load.

Red Cross is continuing its work overseas with the occupation troops, and field directors are on duty to handle communications between servicemen and home chapters. Mrs. Dean pointed out that there has been no letup in work as was anticipated after the war, explaining that problems are more difficult because they involve major adjustments necessary in returning to civilian life.

Sub-zero Weather Strikes Much Of Tri-State Area

Vets Renew Action To Get Hospital In Western Md.

VFW Wants Sugar Rationing Lifted

Members of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at their regular post meeting last night, took strong issue with published reports that the Military Order of Purple Heart was the first veterans' organization to take action to get a hospital for veterans in Western Maryland.

Records of the post show that two years ago, Rep. J. Glenn Beall, attending an installation of officers ceremony at the post, addressed the organization and declared he would use his influence to aid Henry Hart Post in their efforts to get a hospital here. The post at that time was on record for such an institution and had sought aid of legislators and other officials.

It was also mentioned at the meeting that three weeks ago, Old Rail Post 6025, VFW, Mt. Savage, passed a resolution seeking a hospital for veterans in Western Maryland.

Post Commander Raymond Reynolds said the post welcomes the interest of the Order of Purple Heart, but the statements that the Purple Heart is the first organization to take such action are inaccurate and "made some of the boys just a little sore."

The membership last night unanimously voted to send letters to all Maryland representatives and Senators and to other officials, in an effort to obtain a hospital for Cumberland. It is to be explained in the letter that the hospital could serve the entire Tri-State Area, that Cumberland has competent and capable physicians and surgeons, that the city is centrally located and is easily accessable by air, rail, or highway. Other VFW Posts in Western Maryland are expected to participate in the campaign, and Reynolds said the aid of all veterans organizations and others will be welcomed.

Oppose Sugar Rationing

The Post Commander was authorized to have the adjutant direct letters to Maryland senators and representatives opposing the continuance of sugar rationing. There was heated discussion on the subject, all of which favored lifting the ration program. Several veterans, including bakers, confectioners, etc., have started business here and are being forced out of business because they cannot obtain sufficient sugar to operate at a profit, it was reported at the meeting.

Several other old established concerns, some of which are operated by veterans and some of which are not are equally handicapped, post members declared, and they expressed the opinion that sugar controls should be lifted immediately.

It was reported at the meeting that Henry Hart Post is still the largest in the state, with a paid up membership of 1,582 for 1947. Six new members were admitted last night, and a number of applications are to be acted upon.

Degree Team Meeting

James Stemple called a meeting of the post degree team for Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock, saying the meeting is vitally important. He also announced that the degree team has been invited to go to Old Rail Post in Mt. Savage, February 24 to present degree work, and the invitation was accepted.

Harold Hipsley, athletic director of the post called a meeting of all members interested in softball, for February 20 at 7:30 p. m. Plans are to be outlined for the coming season and the post expects to enter

Shortwave Radio Station Approved For Naval Armory

The Federal Communications Commission has authorized the establishment of a short wave radio station for training purposes when the proposed Naval Reserve armory here is completed, according to Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, organizing officer for the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division.

Comdr. Hedrick said that Fifth Naval District headquarters, with FCC approval, has assigned the call letters N5ADD to the station, although it probably will not be put into operation for several months.

Drill practice for radio operators can be held with other Naval Reserve armories in the district, Comdr. Hedrick said, explaining that the FCC has reserved a limited number of special amateur radio call signs for such stations. Other district armories already assigned call letters are those in Baltimore; Wheeling, Huntington and Charleston, W. Va.; and Richmond, Roanoke, Lynchburg, Newport News, Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va.

The short wave station here can be used to co-operate with amateur radio organizations, individual amateurs and local civilian authorities in planning and practicing for emergency communication service in the event of a disaster such as a flood, Comdr. Hedrick said.

He announced that Lt. Comdr. Charles H. Rafferty, USNR, 165 Bedford street, has been appointed training officer in a drill pay status, and will administer the operation of the radio station in co-operation with Lt. A. J. Stauffer, USNR, general training officer of the division.

Comdr. Rafferty was on active duty during the recent war from November, 1943, until November, 1945. His assignments in radio and radar included duty at the Naval Air Station, Miami, Fla., as senior communications training officer.

Comdr. Hedrick said that to date the division has secured 21 of its quota of 25 radiomen. He added that Comdr. Rafferty will also serve as public information officer for the division.

6 Degrees Above Reported In City

Near empty streets and a decided drop in highway traffic attested to the intense cold wave that swept over the Tri-State area yesterday afternoon and last night dropping the temperatures to 4 degrees below in some sections along with reported high winds and snow blizzards in others.

In Cumberland unofficial reports placed the mercury at 6 degrees above at midnight with cloudy weather, but in outlying districts State Police reported 3 and 4 above zero readings, and said high winds were sweeping the roads.

Grantsville in Garrett County, was reported to be the coldest section throughout the area with a 9 below zero being reported by state police, who added that a light snow was blowing about.

Road conditions west of Frostburg, where the temperatures varied from 2 to 6 degrees below, were bad and police said the roads were slick with ice, and advised motorists to use chains.

At Deal, Pa., and Thomas, W. Va., traditionally cold spots in this section, the weather report showed "4 below zero" and about three inches of newly fallen snow.

Six Below In Oakland

In Frostburg, police reported that a light snow which began early in the afternoon had stopped and said a high wind had cleared the streets of both snow and pedestrians.

At Oakland a 6 degree below zero reading was reported, while Altamont and Terra Alta, shivered under driving winds and "4 below zero" readings.

Nearby Westernport, situated on the Potomac River, reported 7 above at 10:30 p. m. and the wind was whipping a light snow through the air, creating almost blizzard conditions.

Temperatures started to drop in the city shortly before noon yesterday when a 44 above reading was taken, and continued to fall throughout the evening until it reached the 6 above at midnight. A light snow fell for a short while early yesterday morning, but by noon only a few flakes were noticeable.

City and state police said traffic was "very light" on the highways and streets, and police stationed in the center of town, said "everybody that has a home is there tonight."

Slick roads east of the city were also reported, and a delay in transferring three prisoners in City Jail back to Frederick where they are wanted on larceny charges, was blamed on the weather and road conditions.

Most Roads Are Clear

State Roads Commission garages stated roads were clear east of Frostburg into Cumberland, but advised all motorists going into Garrett County to use chains. No cinder crews were called out yesterday, supervisors said.

What few cars were parked in downtown Cumberland late last night were attributed to theater goers, and working people, but police said many were experiencing difficulty in getting the motors to run when they were ready to move them.

Police and hospital attaches reported late last night that no one had been treated for frozen limbs, and hospital attendants said the admittance room experienced an unusually quiet night.

"Share-The-Work" Plans Are Sought In Kelly Contract

Local 26 Rejects Special Assessment

Local 26, United Rubber, Cork, Linoleum and Plastic Workers of America, CIO, plans to negotiate plans for sharing all available work at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant on a 40-hour basis, Earl Johnson, president, reported yesterday.

The union wants its contract amended to provide plans for both engineering and production departments, he added.

The present "share-the-work" plan placed into operation recently is on the basis of a six or seven day week and everyone is getting more than five days a week, union officials said.

The union is trying, Johnson said, to negotiate a plan whereby production would come down to 40 hours a week before furloughs would be placed into effect.

In case production should drop below the 40 hour level for a period of four weeks, the company would furlough sufficient men to bring the remaining force to a level of 40 hours or above, he added.

Members of Local 26 yesterday rejected, in a referendum vote, a proposal for a special assessment to provide for a building, strike and defense fund, he reported. Voting on the proposal was conducted yesterday by a committee headed by F. T. Grimes.

The regular meeting of the local will be held tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the union hall.

Second Semester Opens

Students at Frostburg State Teachers College yesterday began second semester work, Miss Lillian Compton, president said, adding that 25 new enrollments were accepted for the term.

The 16 seniors, who are expected to graduate in June, began a half year of elementary practice teaching in the college's elementary school, Miss Compton said. Of the 25 new enrollments, 15 are former service men.
